Sacramento Church Bureau Rebuffs Conservatives Attempting to Oust MCC

by George Mendenhall

The Interfaith Service Bureau (ISB) of Sacramento has resisted efforts of that city's largest church to have the predominantly gay Metropolitan Community Church (MCC) ousted from the interdenominational service organization. As a result, the Capital Christian Center (CCC) has carried out its threat to withdraw its membership and financial support from the ISB in protest, claiming that ISB's decision represents an endorsement of gay lifestyles.

MCC minister Rev. Frieda Smith said, "We're happy, of course, with the ISB vote. But we're sorry that CCC felt it needed to withdraw from such a vital community service organization. I respect the bureau's board for the difficult decision it made and upheld. There is a real outpouring of support at MCC for the bureau."

The chair of the interfaith group said ISB does not question a group's theological stance as a criterion for membership. Rev. Edward Melfort, of Oak Park United Church of Christ, said "MCC's admission into ISB no more suggests that the other members of the bureau agree or disagree with their views on the

It Was A Year For The Worst Anti-Gay Bias; But We Fought Back And Won Some Victories

First of Two Parts

by Brian Jones

For three nights we came, came to this modest plaza of orange tiles at Market and Castro here at the center of the Known Gay Universe. For three nights in one week we screamed and we cried and we shook our fists and we held each other and we vowed to the television cameras which watched us with unblinking eyes:

We will be pushed no further.

For seven awful days in July the world seemed to be crashing down around us and all we had was each other. What we found to our surprise was that having each other was enough.

Netherlands Grants Funds To Complete Gay Memorial

The Dutch parliament voted Dec. 16 to contribute 100,000 guilders — about $44,000—to construct a monument in Amsterdam to all victims of anti-gay oppression. According to a Reuters newswire report, the government contribution should complete the fundraising needed for the $180,000 memorial which will consist of three triangles of pink marble. The appropriation was added to the annual budget of the Netherlands' Ministry of Welfare, Public Health and Culture.

"The monument will be the first architectural symbol of the existence of homosexuals in the Netherlands and in the world, but at the same time it's a warning against persecution," said Heleen van Meurs, a spokeswoman for the Dawn Foundation, organizers of the monument project.

According to Associated Press reports, the memorial was designed by Dutch artist Karin Daan. It will be composed of three equilateral triangles 43 feet long on each side and is to be built near the historic West Church. Organizers hope to have the memorial completed by next spring.

The pink triangles recall the Nazi requirement that gay inmates in the concentration camps be labeled with pink triangles on their uniforms for ready identification.

"For centuries," said van Meurs, "Amsterdam has been the refuge for people who think and act differently."

The city of Amsterdam and three provincial governments had also pledged over $42,000 to the monument's construction. Private donations raised the rest, with a Dec. 7 gala event alone bringing in over $80,000.

Although the symbol to be used in the memorial comes from the Nazi era, organizers pointed out that it wil be a public monument to all victims of homophobia

$15M Suit Filed In Chicago Bar Raid

Charges Cops With Rights Violations; Patrons Harassed, Photographed

by William Burks

CHICAGO — A $15.7 million lawsuit was filed Dec. 12 in federal court against officers of a state antidrug unit who raided a Chicago gay bar Sept. 12, 1985. The suit, filed on behalf of three patrons of Carol's Speakeasy, on N. Wells St. in Chicago, charges officers of the Northeastern Metropolitan Enforcement Group (NEMEG) with violation of the patrons' rights, and seeks compensatory and punitive damages for the three plaintiffs.

The class action suit seeks the confidential return or destruc-tion of all information and pho-tographs taken from the approxi-mately 50 patrons by NEMEG during the three-hour raid, ac-cording to Harvey Grossman, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Illinois.

The ACLU is representing The ACLU is representing plaintiffs Allen Patrykus, Richard Bubel, and John Doe (pseudonym) in their suit for $50,000 compensatory damages and $1 million punitive damages apiece for each of five counts against Frank Gomilla, director of NE-MEC. Lohn Huynal. NEMEC's MEG, John Hymel, NEMEG's policy board chairman, Ralph Rizzardo, and other unknown officers of NEMEG and the Chicago Police Department.

The five counts of the suit are unlawful detention, illegal search, invasion of privacy, denial of equal protection, and denial of right to association. A sixth count right to association. A sixth count is a class action seeking return of all information illegally gathered by NEMEG during the raid to the approximately 50 patrons in the bar at the time.

The night of Sept. 12, 1985, bar patrons were forced at gun-point to lie face down on the floor when 10-15 plainclothes NEMEG officers — a special antidrug division of the Illinois Department of State Police consisting of officers from city, county, and state law enforcement groups — entered Carol's.

NEMEG officers then search ed each patron and demanded his name, address, marital status, employer, bank, credit cards, names of relatives, and who he lived with. Officers also seized Carol's membership files. Each bar patron was photographed before being allowed to leave.

Some patrons did not at first realize the raid was a police ac-tion, but thought the bar was be-ing robbed. Men who lifted their heads above the floor were struck by NEMEG officers or pushed to the floor. Officers referred to those they had detained as "fag-gots" and "queers."

Uniformed Chicago police officers entered Carol's after the raid had begun and took up staraid had begun and took up sta-tions near the doors, the suit alleges. These officers observed NEMEG's procedures, but took no steps to interfere or stop them. The Chicago police officers, whose identity is not known at present to the plaintiffs or the ACLU, are also named as defendants in the case.

A complex issue in the suit is how to return documents and photographs to all victims of the action in such a way that maintains their confidentiality, Gross-man said. "We want to be sure that those documents are delivered to the court sealed and that no copies of them are retained by law enforcement officials," he

The suit seeks an injunction requiring NEMEG to notify bar patrons of the existence of photographs and other information collected during the raid, and to return such material to those requesting it or destroy all material not requested within 30 days after notification.

The only arrest warrant NE-MEG had was for a bartender, Grossman said. The bartender was not at the bar that evening and was arrested later at his home. No arrests were made on drug charges at Carol's and no illegal substances were discovered during pat-down searches.

"It's clear from statements of clients," Grossman said, "that the conduct NEMEG engaged in was particularized to the situ-ation of raiding a gay bar: using offensive slurs, homophobic ges-tures, wearing rubber gloves to do pat-down searches, ridiculing patrons about their marital status, letting it be known they were offended by the perceived sexual orientation of the patrons."

Grossman described the action as "one of the most vicious and blatantly unlawful acts committed by law enforcement in re-cent times in Chicago."

Grossman and ACLU cooperating attorney Harold C. Hirshman are representing the plaintiffs. Doe is using a pseudonym for personal reasons, Grossman said, which are likely to be resolved, allowing him to use his real name before the case is settled.

The case is being heard by Judge George N. Leighton of the U.S. District Court for Northern Illinois.

Melfort added that while the Melfort added that while the bureau was "devastated" by the loss of the large CCC congregation, "We are not demoralized by the loss of a good member. We will continue to go on."

"Metropolitan Community Church seeks recognition," Rev. Glen Cole of CCC, told his congregation, "for the advancement of its own purposes and lifestyle. We as a church cannot condone that because of its great detri-ment to the well-being of inno-cent people. The Bible speaks so forceably to the issue of homosexforceably to the issue of homosex-uality that to even call such a group 'Christian' is a travesty.' CCC had demanded that ISB re-verse its earlier vote admitting MCC. The 3,000 member center is the largest and most conserva-tive church in the Sacramento

Cole said MCC would like CCC to remain because "they would like nothing better than to be able to say, 'We are in the same group as Capital Christian Center,' which, of course, makes it appear that we are condoning their position and organization."

He added, "This is the same as with any other sinful person. One can love the murderer but not the act. Christ loved the sinner but hated the sin. We hope that the bureau and other chur-ches will stick to the basics and MCC-Sacramento, with 150 members, has raised $1,200 to compensate for the $900 loss of funds contributed annually by CCC, making it a major contributor. ISB has 116 member churches and synagogues and has an annual budget of $100,000.

Bars Offer Holiday Rides To Keep Drinkers From Driving

by Allen White

Mayor Dianne Feinstein and Police Chief Frank Jordan this week praised the San Francisco Tavern Guild for its participation in the mayor's "Driving Under the Influence Project." The project provides a free taxi ride home for holiday celebrants who have had too much to drink.

The plan was announced last Wednesday in City Hall. According to Feinstein, rides will be provided from public places such as bars and restaurants from Wednesday, Dec. 24, to Friday, Jan. 2 between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m.

Chuck Morrow, president of the San Francisco Tavern Guild, said its member bars would be participating in the program. He said he would be working to encourage all bars and their customers to use the program.

tomers to use the program.

Mayor Feinstein said, "The participation of the San Francis-co Tavern Guild in this program is very meaningful. The program can save lives. I hope others will take the lead of the Tavern Guild."

Police Chief Frank Jordan also praised the Tavern Guild. "It is very positive to see the Tavern Guild take the initiative to see the program implemented. There is an opportunity for the bars to help out."

Jordan said that the program is a cooperative effort. "It will make it easier for officers. Officers would like to see people take a taxi home and not get hurt in an accident or get arrested. In this program, everybody wins."

Chief Jordan commented that there have already been 2,000 arrests this year for drunken driving. It is his hope, and that of the mayor, that through an increased effort the number can be reduced.

David Custead, from the mayor's office, worked with the Tavern Guild to gain their participation in the project. They will join 120 other San Francisco bars and restaurants and eight cab companies during the ten days of the plan.

The local program is part of the nationwide CareCab campaign which has provided 45,000 rides during the holidays since 1980.

CareCab is an alternative to the drinking driver. Party goers will be picked up only from public places such as bars and restaurants. The rider will then be taken home within the city limits of San Francisco. Riders will pay the difference if they travel farther.

The local CareCab number is 666-7404.

Integrity Christmas Celebration

Integrity will celebrate a gay and lesbian positive Christmas Candlelight Mass at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 28, followed by a festive free holiday reception, in St. John's Church, San Francisco. The Candlelight Service will include Christmas pageantry, carols, communion, and special music. The service will use nonsexist language and offer healing.

Integrity is a lesbian and gay affirming community of Episcopalians and friends. It is not necessary to be Episcopalian to participate. Everyone is welcome.

In the San Francisco Bay Area, Integrity celebrates "Gay & Lesbian/Mass" at 5:30 p.m. each Sunday in St. John's Church, 1661 15th Street, San Francisco. St. John's is accessible by 16th Street BART and the 14 Mission, 33 Ashbury, and 49 Van Ness MUNI buses. For more information, please call the Integrity information number, (415) 431-5859.

Christmas in Hayes Valley

All Dressed Up And Some Place To Go

Hayes Valley is the newest gay neighborhood in San Francisco. It still has the feel of "newness" about it. There are no Christmas garlands strung across the street on Hayes but the antique shops, art galleries and restaurants in the area have done themselves proud with holiday wreaths and ribbons.

On Gough Street, just off Hayes, and across the street from Ivy's is a little restaurant that has been here for ten years, the Blue Muse. The Blue Muse (409 Gough Street) serves a neighborhood clientele in a small, intimate dining room decorated with mirrors, plants and frequent splashes of the color blue.

"We'll be serving dinner until 11 p.m. on Christmas Eve," said owner Sidney Wong, "but we'll be closed on Christmas." Wong added that for those who come by on Christmas Eve for dinner there will be champagne on the house. For those who want something stronger, the restaurant opened a full bar recently.

Ivy's opened in June, 1980, a lvy's opened in June, 1980, a few blocks behind the opera house, in what used to be a second-hand piano shop and before that a drug store. This was a tough neighborhood then. But with several good restaurants and the Muscle System Gym opening, the character of the area has definitely gone upbeat.

Ivy's, at 398 Hayes, is a large restaurant with a bar that is crowded with early evening diners. The atmosphere is pleasant and quiet, with dim, romantic lighting. On Christmas Day, Ivy's will be serving a special dinner including soup, salad, entree (four choices including, prime rib, grilled swordfish, roast squab, and grilled lamb chops). Cost is $25 per person and reservations are probably wise. Hours on Christmas will be 3-8:30 p.m. Hayes Street is definitely gen-Ivy's, at 398 Hayes, is a large

When you step inside Pen-dragon you'll find the closest California equivalent to a real English tea and sweet shop. A glass-fronted cabinet near the entrance shows you the house jewels: fresh baked pastries, rolls, quiches. There is an espresso machine if you want a good Italian coffee. Check out their blueberry Eng-lish scone ($1.25) or their Welsh Miner's scone made with ham and cheese. You might decide to bring some home for a holiday

One of the new small places on Hayes Street is Cafe Corbas at 384 Hayes. This is a long lean cof-504 hayes. This is a long lean confee shop specializing in fresh and ever-changing coffee roasts. There is a little seating in front and a garden in back for warm days. During the winter this is a agood location to write thank you notes for all your Christmas presents while having a fast lunch before going back to work.

Bashul Parik and Corky Engel are the co-owners here. They formerly owned the Daily Grind on Market Street. Corbas buys mercial roasters, according to Parik, because, "roasters usually do very well with a few of their roasts, but not with all of them.

Colors, Lights Turn Streets Into Fantasy

by Allen White

Like a colorful centerpiece at a huge banquet, a brightly lit Christmas tree now dominates the corner of 18th and Cas-tro Streets. And over on Haight Street there are many store windows all themed to the merriment of the holiday season. The two streets exemplify alternative lifestyles of the city in a special holiday mode.

A week ago Supervisor John Molinari raised his hand to symbolically light the holiday tree in the Castro. With the music of the San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus, Christmas in the Castro officially began.

On Integrity

We are going to visit the arena of Profound Humanness called "Integrity." Sometimes "integrity" is reduced to mean a kind of moral uprightness and steadfastness, in the sense of saying, "He has too much integrity to ever take a bribe.

But profound integrity goes far beyond this. Sometimes, in order to distinguish it from the more limited popular usage, it is called "secondary integrity." This is the integrity which is not constrained by limited moralities, however well-intentioned. The integrity that is profound living is the singularity of thrust of a life committed and ordering every dimension of the self towards that commitment. Thus the self is in fact shaped by the self, and focused towards that commitment. You can say that an audacious creation of the self takes place in integrity, without which you are simply the creation of the various forces impacting you in your society.

Thus the basis of integrity is a destinal resolvea resolve that chooses and sets your destiny and out of which your whole life is ordered. The object of that resolve is the ultimate decision of each person, and each person makes that choice consciously or unconsciously. To do so with awareness is the height of man's responsibility. It is incarnate freedom. It is what real freedom looks like. When man has thus exercised his freedom he realizes that to be true to himself ever thereafter he has a unique position to look at the values of his society. He is no longer bound by the opinions and codes of his fellow-man, but reevaluates them on the basis of their impact on his destinal resolve.

Thus the man of integrity is continuously engaged in a societal transvaluation, a moving across the values of society and reinterpreting them in line with his life's thrust. It does not give him the liberty of ignoring his society, but his obligation transcends the conformity of living within the codes and mores of his society. Thus the man of profound integrity always seems to not quite fit with his fellow-men, but his actions always are appropriate for him, even to those who oppose him.

No matter how odd the man of profound integrity appears to his neighbors, he experiences himself as securely anchored. While he is very clear that this world is not his home, nevertheless he experiences himself as having found his nativ vale. He experiences an eternal at-one-ness, not so much with the currents and waves of activity around him, but with the deeper trends of history itself. Amid the flux of wavering to and fro that is so evident in others, he experiences an inexplicable rootedness, as though he has sunk a taproot deep into the foundation of the earth itself. Though he experiences his life as a long journey, even an endless journey, towards the object of his resolve, yet he never senses himself as a stranger on the journey. It's as if he'd been there before. Original integrity is experienced primarily by this sense of at-one-ness.

Kierkegaard once wrote a book about this kind of integrity that he titled, "Purity of Heart is to Will One Thing." An ancient philosopher focused his wisdom around this integrity with the advice, "Know yourself, and to your own self, be true."

Rest In Peace— But Not In Chron

Daily Bans Use of 'Lover' in Obits; Relatives Only; All Others 'Roommates'

by Allen White

The San Francisco Chronicle astounded many last week by announcing a policy prohibiting the listing of names of surviving lovers in death notices in that paper.

The policy statement came in response to a letter to the litor which appeared in the Dec. 17 Chronicle. It said, "The Chronicle policy is to publish only the immediate blood relatives as survivors. This is based on objections by relatives when non-relatives were listed as survivors." The policy was then clarified on Friday, Dec. 19, in another response to a letter. The clarification said, "The names of legal spouses are, of course, ordinarily also published in most obituaries."

Phelps Dewey, assistant to the publisher, said the policy was not new and that "there is no change in our policy." He acknowledged that the Wednesday comment was not clear, nor well written. This, he said, was the reason the policy was clarified in the Friday paper

Randy Shilts, an openly gay rechangy Smits, an openly gay re-porter for the San Francisco Chronicle, told Bay Area Report-er he was "appalled" by the policy. He said he has listed gay lovers "more times than I can remember."

Jerry Burns, editorial page editor for the Chronicle and a 22-year veteran of the paper said, "I didn't even know of the policy until I read the statement.

Tom Simpson, who operates the largest gay funeral counseling service in the Bay Area commented, "I was not aware of the policy. It was never mentioned in the past." He added, "The Chronicle has always been very connertaive." cooperative.

When asked why so many stories had appeared with the names of lovers, Phelps Dewey said, "They must have slipped by." He added, "What Randy Shilts writes are news stories, not obituaries." He said the obituaries have a semi-legal status and there is a "rigid criteria" used.

Tom Simpson pointed out, as did several others, that obituaries are news stories and not legal documents in any manner. "The closest thing to a legal document is the death notices which are paid for," he said. The death notices are submitted by the notices are submitted by the family to the San Francisco Newspaper Agency which co-ordinates paid advertising for both the Chronicle and the Examiner.

Simpson noted that the copy in death notices is exactly what the family specifies. He said sometimes a lover will be listed, other times not.

Having handles over 200 funerals in the last three years, Simpson said that he has many times asked the Newspaper Agency to contact the news departments of the Chronicle and the Examiner about a person who has died. Sometimes this is at the request of the family. Other times it is because of the prominence of the deceased.

In his opinion, "This censor-ship is so unnecessary. It is so totally opposite to the paid policy of the paper. It is totally discriminatory," said Simpson.

Shilts stated, "It is appalling not to list the names of lovers in stories." He said he hoped to meet with the editors of the paper this week regarding the increase As a popular state. issue. As an openly gay reporter he said he has seen little, homophobia in the Chronicle's news

The "new" policy surfaced within days after the office manager of the Chronicle's news department died of AIDS. Chester Howard, who had been at the paper for several decades, died earlier this month.

Herb Caen's assistant, Karen Hunt, called Howard "the glue that kept the paper together." Editor Jerry Burns said, "Howard's death was a shock. He was terrific."

In Shilt's words, "Now no one working in the news department of the Chronicle can say they don't know someone who has AIDS."

Many said it was ironic that the Chronicle would issue their edict at the same time as the death of Chester Howard. Most people at the Chronicle knew Howard was gay and most everyone who worked with him was shocked to hear of his death.

There has been considerable discussion in the Chronicle's discussion in the Chronicle's news department about the policy not to identify lovers in obituaries. One editor at the paper has posted a letter protesting the policy. Phelps Dewey is the only person who has stated he is supportive of the position.

The implementation of the of the policy too in last Saturday's (Dec. 20) Chronicle with the death notice of gay Republican leader Tom Isenberg.

In reference to Isenberg's lover, Don James, the B.A.R. had listed him as Isenberg's "companion." In the Chronicle he was demoted to "Mr. Isenberg's roommate for 10 years." Don James is not, according to the Chronicle, a "survivor."

In The Spirit

hristmas is an ancient feast. Human beings from earliest antiquity have marked this season with celebrations. The time of the year holds many special meanings.

It is the season of the shortest days, the beginning of winter, the end of the year. So, people light lights, gather together for warmth, sing songs, give gifts, and look to ushering in a new year. It's a time to celebrate.

In one way, it makes no sense - celebrate in chilly, dark days? But Christmastime is a reminder. We remind ourselves that even amidst these bleak days we are glad to be alive, and glad to be with one another, to fight back the chill and the dark by sharing and caring for each other.

The holidays are really more of a social time than a religious com memoration. Christianity merely adapted an age-old feast which, like so many feasts of antiquity, focused on indulgence. So, we get together, renew acquaintances, send greeting cards, share banquets, and go shopping for days. Go ahead — eat too much, spend too much, give it away. A new year is soon beginning.

ay people seldom need to be convinced of the need for a party any reason will do (if you must have reasons). This holiday season we have many causes to celebrate. It may be true that we are under siege, but we've had some victories and achievements this year.

We beat Lyndon LaRouche and his cohorts in their attempt to quarantine anyone associated with AIDS. Not only did we defeat them, we trounced the forces of hysteria and ignorance. Our victory was crucial not just because it stopped one demented law from going into effect. The real significance of our win over Prop. 64 is that we demonstrated that people can be reasoned with on the threat of AIDS and will not be

Those who campaigned against Prop. 64 have every good reason to be proud of the gift they gave the community this year

This Christmas, we can be thankful too for the progress made on the medical front in the fight against AIDS. Research breakthroughs are occurring at a fast pace. Treatments are being developed and possible routes to future vaccines are being mapped out.

e can be thankful we live in a city that has developed and financed a wider array of services related to the AIDS epidemic than has any other city or state in the nation. Thanks to the Thair has any other city of state in the haton. Thanks to the political leadership of this city, we have a unique network of services. Their compassion has wisely paid off — costs of treatment in San Francisco rank lowest in the U.S. The City That Knows How is once again a model for the world.

We can be thankful too for all the community volunteers and activists who bring issues to the forefront, propose solutions and work for results. The year-long ARC/AIDS Vigil is an example of the persistence and sacrifice that has built our city's awareness and compassion

The gay and lesbian community is stronger, larger, better organized, and more powerful today than it ever has been. Men and women are m united now than in the past. We recognize our mutual interests and the support we can give each other.

The women's community has especially grown in the past year. To-day, lesbians are more visible and more powerful than ever and making contributions in numerous ways.

We've seen some shifts away from the way things used to be. Castro we've seen some shirts away from the way things used to be. Casho Street is a bit quieter and South of Market is no longer the gay turf it once was. In place of the old ghetto, the new gay community is better integrated into the whole fabric of San Francisco's life, as well as that of California and the nation. Despite all the changes, we are here to stay and are solidly established and better prepared to meet the future.

We lost many good people this past year and fought many battles. But we have every reason to celebrate a merry Christmas this week and to look forward to the new year.

The Vigil Still Stands

by Harvey Maurer Secretary, ARC/AIDS Vigil

he Bay Area Reporter's recent interest in the Vigil (editorial Dec. he Bay Area Reporter's recent interest in the Vigitleditorial Dec. 18, Vol. XVI, No. 51) and its impact contained serious misconceptions and inaccuracies which need correction. The Vigil has maintained a presence 24 hours a day in UN Plaza and fulfills the distionary definition "wakefulness maintained for a reason during the normal hours for sleeping." It is astonishing to us that the editor of the B.A.R. doesn't know our reasons which have been on public display for the part of th for the past 14 months. They are:

- We appeal for a federal government commitment of $500 million this year to find a cure for AIDS, not to be taken from existing social federal programs. This would amount to one hour of federal govern-
- We appeal for a federal recognition of AIDS Related Conditions as a critical dimension of the AIDS crisis affecting vast numbers of Americans. We call for proper funding for medical care and support for people with ARC, including such services as Medicare and Social Security Disability Income;
- We appeal to the Federal Drug Administration to immediately allow American physicians to prescribe medicines and treatments for ARC and AIDS that are available to their colleagues in other countries;
- We appeal to President Reagan and government officials at all levels to publicly condemn AIDS-related discrimination against cur-rent risk groups, and to repudiate incitements of fear and hatred which exploit this tragic epidemic

he first, second, and fourth appeals have not yet been seriously addressed. The $500 million asked for was to be directed to find a cure and not to be the total effort, including building of physical structures, provision of educational materials, and patient services in terms of Medicare (here Medi-Cal) components and disability income. The expansion of the AIDS definition is welcomed because many more will eventually benefit, but it has not happened yet and does not cover what most authorities include in their ad-hoc definition of "severe ARC." As for the fourth appeal, the most recent comment on AIDS from President Reagan to my memory was his agreement, in a joke, that Kadafy should visit San Francisco and contract AIDS. That should tell you something of his private thoughts surrounding this epidemic. Whatever improvement has taken place in the availability of drugs and their prompt release is a response to our third appeal and is certainly welcomed. But, there are also coming to light stories of internal politicking in the CDC and the limited directions — prejudicial research directions — and their impact on the fight against AIDS.

From the beginning of the Vigil until October of 1986, the unified response of the federal government to the AIDS epidemic was that everything needing to be done was being done and that any monies needed were being spent. The Surgeon General's report and the report of the Institute of Medicine, National Academy of Sciences, confronting AIDS, tear that lie apart. They provide cogent recommendations which meet and even render modest our four appeals. Instead of misinformation are averaged exhibitions on bould be conventionated in this high. which meet and even render modes to rour appears. Instead of mis-informing your readership, you should be communicating the truth that there still is a budget crisis, that new funding is difficult to arrange, that the massive monies and efforts recommended need active and diligent support. They are only reports and recommendations and need support and community response before one dollar is seen in any uesday, Dec. 16, there was a subcommittee meeting of the board of supervisors addressing the issue of people with ARC and people with AIDS and the homeless. Among other concerns the Vigil asked for the city to adopt a "working definition of severe ARC." You may not realize it, but the May, 1986 resolution of the board of supervisors to direct AIDS organizations to provide equivalent services to PWARC has accomplished virtually nothing because we are still waiting for a report from the Public Health Department for such a definition and they are still waiting for the CDC. So before we start saying how much has been done, let's see what reality is and what real impact our good intentions have on patient services. good intentions have on patient services

We wish the opinions of other Vigil founders such as John Belskus, Frank Richter, and Ed Wyre had been sought. Perhaps the people who are at the Vigil site presently and experiencing the cold and rain deserved to have been included.

Lastly, the Vigil has no interest in remaining until the last person in the US is educated effectively about ARC and AIDS. We are not unreasonable and a change of tactics should happen when there is effective change in the federal government's response to the AIDS epidemic. Translate two excellent reports into concrete programs adequately funded which reach the public and patients and develop a workable definition for "severe ARC" so that suffering patients can receive comprehensive support economically and medically.

Have Vigil's Goals Really Been Met?

★ Your recent front page story (12/11/86) reporting Nations Plaza, by its founders as well as H.H.S. regional director George Miller, is in desperate need of comment and clarification.

I feel the ''founder'' (Steven Russell) needs to sit back and review his words and actions. He has to face the ''reality'' of what he is calling for.

Has the Vigil "met" its "original" goals? Has the Vigil really served its purpose? Does Russell know something that the remainder of the gay population is unaware of? I'm afraid Russell may have erred in his statements to your reporter.

I have seen NO dramatic increase in the federal onies made available for AIDS research and treat-ent (not substantially enough above the -0- dollars monies made available for ALDS seems ment (not substantially enough above the -0- dollars in 1980). I am not aware of any headway being made to enhance the "rights" of people with AIDS. I am also not aware of any significant action by the Reagan administration to prevent and outlaw "discrimination" that is freely administered to AIDS victims by the public-at-large. The only "blight" I see that is even remotely connected with the Vigil is the "corrosion" of intellect by the anti-homosexual deviates in Washington. With these facts in mind, Mr. Russell, have the original goals really been met? Or, are you prancing down the road to "passivity" and "conformity," as laid out by the government?

As soon as Reagan puts as much money up for AIDS research and treatment as he has for "right-wing causes" (drug wars, Contra wars, Star Wars, etc.) then and only then will I agree that the "goal" had been "met." I would really like to know how Russell feels these goals have been met.

Panhandling, homelessness and unsanitary con-Panhandling, homelessness and unsanitary conditions are not products of the AIDS Vigil, but a byproduct of the Reaganomics sham. If the police and businesspeople don't like what they see at the Vigil site, they should sit right down and write their congressmen and senators about increasing AIDS funding and the Vigil will move on in the manner intended.

Reports of the "effects" the Vigil is having on federal employees is only another sign that the Vigil is "working." If it bothers them enough then maybe they will attempt to take constructive action in getting the administration off its ass. The fact that they didn't bring anything to the AIDS Vigil this holiday season is only a stronger sign of their impending "pacification" by Big Brother.

Long live the vigil!

Boo, Examiner

★ This letter was sent to the San Francisco Ex-

There is something clearly wrong with an editorial policy that allows publication of "Letters to the Editor" which so blatantly espouse hatred and discrimination against homosexuals (See Dec. 14 "letter" by Don Grundman.)

Current knowledge on the subject makes it clear Current knowledge on the subject makes it clear that—after discounting the effects caused by the unique pressures of being a homosexual in a pervasively pro-heterosexual, homophobic society—there is nothing that inherently distinguishes homosexuals from heterosexuals except the fact that heterosexuals are persons who are involuntarily and reflexively sexually appeared by appearing the appearing product the product of the p ually aroused by persons of the opposite gender; homosexuals are persons who are involuntarily and reflexively sexually aroused by persons of the same gender. Neither heterosexuals nor homosexuals choose their condition.

Homosexuals are, however, vastly out-numbered, surrounded and dominated by heterosexuals—which makes them easy targets for bullying, stereotyping, and scapegoating.

Recognizing this fact, a responsible paper would exercise its editorial discretion by refusing to print highly inflammatory "letters" whose sole effect is to bully and scapegoat on an already oppressed, innocent and relatively powerless minority.

Even a cursory review of current knowledge will educate your editorial board to the gross stupidity of treating blatantly homophobic "letters" as legitimate points of view meriting serious attention. They are outrageous, extremist positions based either on total ignorance and paranoia or on a cynical ma-nipulation of public attitudes for selfish gain.

Your printing of such "letters" demonstrates either extreme irresponsibility or insidious homo-phobia. You certainly would never print such a "let-ter" if the blatant prejudice and bigotry displayed in it involved race or national origin. There are no significant differences between these types of bigotry.

I, for one, will never buy another Examiner until the paper begins taking a more responsible, better informed position. I also recommend a boycott of your paper by the entire San Francisco gay community.

Remembering Gene Zuchelli

★ We were high school students in Oakland in 1947. he from Oakland and me from Fremont (Oakland).
We would see each other on weekends at the Lake Merritt Boat House area which, in those days, was the basic meeting place of underage but active, pro-gressive teenagers. We knew who we were. We knew where we were going and, above all, we knew how to get there.

I will relate now to some of our great frolicking days of those late 1940s and early 1950s.

Gene, Bill B. Coolie, Kismet, Don B., Bill G., and a few others would meet at Union Square at least once a month on a Friday, some of us from Oakland, the rest from San Francisco. We ventured to exciting places like Sutro Baths for swimming (15 cents), ate coconut cream pie at a little shop at the streetcar terminal, swam in cold foggy Fleishacker Pool at late hours (ripples in the pool got us caught twice). Of course, we did this "au naturel."

Sundays were very special to us. We met early Sunday mornings among the pigeons of Union Square—we from the East Bay via the Key System A Train. Money spent and packages of beer in tow, we walked, sometimes rode the streetcar to the Beach near the Zoo. We walked, camped and laughed through the Zoo. We walked, camped and laughed through the sands. Sometimes we brought acquaintances from previous days with us. Our sort of private area was near the Olympic Club Golf Course on the County Line (in those days if you were challenged by police or sheriff, you just crossed the border — so we were led to believe). We swam in the ocean, cooked and feasted by warm log fires. We loved and cared about each other. each other.

Some of us grew up to positions to be envied, some of us did not. But Gene, whom I've known and loved since the 1940s and through the 1950s, 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, will never be forgotten.

Love to you, Gene, and God Bless.

To Brian Jones: thanks for my memories I will never forget. And to the rest of Gene's friends and family, please accept my condolences. We did not lose a "sissie," we gained a man to remember.

We, too, recognize that education, including explicit and detailed sexual information, is the primary and currently the most important method of curtailing this deadly epidemic. We also realize what a courageous and admirable stand you have taken in this regard resisting the stand you have taken in this regard, resisting the apparent pressures from uninformed individuals and organizations who advocate other avenues that have no basis in fact.

Our organization has learned that education in volving explicit and detailed sexual matters is often very unpopular. However, after living with and fight-ing this dread disease for the last five years, we too have concluded that this is the only effective course now available

We also want to applaud your sensitivity in re-gnizing the dangers of bigotry and prejudice surrounding AIDS.

HHS, Ronnie Are The Culprits

★ Mr. George Miller, Western Regional Director of Health and Human Services (HHS) under the Reagan Administration attacked the ARCAIDS Vigil in a letter (Dec. 8) to Mayor Feinstein, Calling the Vigil a "blight," he went on to claim HHS "has been Vigil a "blight," he went on to claim HHS "has been a leader in this country in the battle against AIDS." We believe, as do many in our community, that the real blight in our society is the failure of the Reagan Administration and HHS to adequately fight the AIDS epidemic with necessary funding for effective research, education, health care and protection against discrimination. against discrimination

Over one year ago, the Vigil called for $500 million a year for research in the first of the four moral ap-peals. At that time, some thought that this was an peals. At that time, some thought that this was an unrealistic goal. But the Vigil activists were convinced otherwise, also demanding that the money not come from existing social programs. Today, the National Academy of Science (NAS), representing our nation's top scientists, has called for twice that amount, $1 billion, as well as yearly research. It has also condemned the current federal effort as "woefully inadequate." The leadership Mr. Miller brags about in his letter coming from HHS was never there and still is not there. and still is not there.

Indeed, if George Miller and his buddies in the Mite House were concerned about being in the White House were concerned about being in the forefront of the battle against the epidemic, they would publicly and loudly beat the drum to whip up support for the recent NAS proposals: $1 billion a year for research and $1 billion a year for health care and education.

Instead, George Miller is using his personal leadership to lobby our mayor, our business leaders, our law enforcement leaders to bring the encampment at 50½ UN Plaza to a end. Perhaps our esteemed public servant is fearful of criticism of HHS policies and their failure, fearful that he and his bosses will soon be called to an angry accounting by the public as this terrible epidemic spreads throughout the

From its beginning, the Vigil chose the difficult road of non-violent civil disobedience as a way of dramatizing the human side of the crisis. Citizens for Medical Justice was itself born of similar protest when we sat down in front of the governor's door in the State Capitol and demanded that he sign into law a bill making discrimination against those with ARC, AIDS and other diseases illegal in California. Four of our people go to trial in late January. They are entering a plea of not guilty based on compelling moral necessity and could go to jail for many months because of their stand of conscience. We understand the power of moral protest and could not do otherwise than stand with the Vigil when it is being attacked, condemned and slandered by forces representing bigotry and ignorance.

Martin Luther King, Jr. once observed that if there Martin Luther King, Jr. once observed that if there were only one road for solving a crisis, there would be one hell of a traffic jam and nobody would move forward. In fighting AIDS, our community has developed a diversity of organizations out of necessity, the AIDS Foundation, Shanti, the Emergency Fund, the Stop AIDS Project only to name a few. That diversity is our strength and we are all proud of it. The Vigil has played its role on the city, state, and federal levels as one of the voices for progressive programs while it has conducted public education and provided while it has conducted public education and provided necessary services on a 24-hour basis.

Everyone in the community who sees our diversity as more than just a fashionable slogan, who sees it as an important source of our community strength, supports the Vigil in withstanding a cheap attack by those representing bigotry and ignorance.

The Man at 18th And Castro

★ It is a well-known fact to most of us, that federal, state, city and charity funds to help people stricken with AIDS are not what they should or could be. It doesn't take much imagination to visualize how much more uncomfortable the lives of our brethren are, due to this disparagement.

It has shaken my faith in humanity to see what this epidemic has unleashed in the way of human compassion, that is to say, a tremendous lack of it. It further has shaken my faith in our community to see the blatant alo

I am referring to the emaciated man with AIDS who was obviously very ill and had stationed himself at the ever chic "Hibernia Beach" at Castro and 18th, with a sign reading "Please help me, I have AIDS." Instead of our brothers and sisters helping this man he was being ignored by a great many. How many of you reading this were out shopping Sunday Dec. 7 in the Castro or out cruising, browsing or eating? You were so busy with those impressive, trasteful, and expensive gifts for your friends (with AIDS or without) and so "wrapped-up" with yourselves that you failed to notice this man! If he didn't warrant your money, he at least warranted your attention. Death and disease are very proud evils in our world. Our compassion costs us so little, if it is worth so much to those who need it. Why do so many refuse to give it freely. Let's get a grip here! We've got to meet this "Proud Death" with an even greater power, our love and our compassion. Let's use it!

The funds that government and private agencies provide for our stricken fellow humans does not have to be all that is available to these people. Their last days are going to be miserable enough. What have you done lately to make one of their days even a little more comfortable? If you can honestly say to yourself that you have freely shared your wealth (however pitiful you feel your wealth is) with someone who is dying of AIDS then this letter is not for you, but maybe you can imbibe your sense of responsibility to those who are less aware.

The rest of you ...

Now I read in the B.A.R. that David Lamble and Romanovsky and Phillips are performing on KQED-TV and radio. Are they so hard up to be used to slap the rest of us down at the City Hall hearings? Don't they realize that they are tiny bones (nothing personal or sexual meant) being thrown to us to hold off further demonstrations and demands for gays on the KQED board, and an end to such atrocities as that supposedly AIDS-spreading guy on a KQED show.

Health Care Is A Right

★ What could be more grotesque than watching an individual, a community, be ravaged by AIDS? Simple: the fact that some people, some corporations, and some industries profit from it, and have the "freedom" to withhold their services or products if they deem that providing them might not be worth it, profit-wise (i.e., cash or prestige).

The current battle with the insurance companies prompts this letter. What a terrible shame that intelligent and highly committed lawyers have to use their time and energy getting this insurance company to reverse denial of coverage, getting that insurance regulation body to create non-discriminatory policy. If the results are "favorable," everybody's rates go up. Of course, the companies would rather discriminate, but however it turns out, one thing will stay the same — their profits.

This approach to the insurance problem is a little like trying to treat diarrhea with a cork. The problem is systemic and no amount of band-aids will address the real issue: All people should be entitled to free health care. To deny this on any grounds is morally and ethically unjustifiable. Only one other developed country in the world doesn't provide a national health care system for its citizens (hint: it's the same country that invented and institutionalized apartheid.)

When I worked at an outpatient clinic here in San Francisco, part of my job was to hear patients' complaints. Most of them concerned the fees charged. "Too high!" "Why was I charged for this, nothing happened?" etc. But if I suggested that medical care really ought to be free, almost no one took the idea seriously; they either continued to gripe about the bill on their way out, or gave a knee-jerk response defending the system, e.g. "Well, doctors have to make some money!" Born in the USA and brainwashed from birth that socialized medicine is a communist lot. How sad that so many people still think someone else's wealth needs to be protected more than their own health.

Now more than ever we need to remove glory and gold from health care and its attendant industries. Just imagine how much further along we'd be if the experimental treatments weren't determined by image-conscious researchers deciding they'd look foolish testing an herb that shows promise. Imagine how many of our loved ones might be alive and well if drug testing weren't determined by whether or not the drug company had "enough of a market" or if production were "cost-efficient."

Good health care is not a privilege, it is our right.
Sen. Ted Kennedy and Rep. Ron Dellums have introduced (separate) bills in their respective houses for years without success. Let's start letting them, and more importantly our elected congresspeople know we're for it, and urge the latter to co-sponsor the bills.

To hell with the insurance companies — we've got a real problem on our hands.

Good Letters, Great Buns

★ I've been reading the BAR for as long as I've been living in San Francisco, a good seven years. I must say I've always enjoyed reading the letters to the editor. In fact it's one of my favorite sections. When it comes to the controversy over the Buns Contest at the Endup I have to say I don't see what the problem is. I've gone to most of their contests and had nothing but a good time. I think the MC's are very entertaining, the judges amusing and fun, not to mention the contestants to die for. Not only can I have a few drinks and dance. I get to be among an audience of some hot guys. Basically I find both the Buns Calendar Contest and The Jock Strap contest very enjoyable.

Read It And Weep

★ Has any of the "upset with the Pope" crowd ever wondered where the Pope gets his "official pro-nouncements"? Certainly he doesn't make things up as he goes along, he has a guide book, full of rules, it's called the Bible, and was written by the God of Christianity. To be a Christian it is absolutely necessary to believe this. Certainly the Pope believes this. Therefore it should have come as no surprise to anyone that the Pope would come out against homosexuality and homosexuals.

It really doesn't matter what the Pope's personal opinion about lesbians and gays is, or whether he is gay or not. What is important is that he is following his rule book, the Bible, as written by God. He's not making news, he is reporting it. The problem here is not with the Pope, but with the Bible. God is very clear that homosexual activity is an abomination and that homosexuals should be put to death. Of course, God also says that the Earth is flat, you can move mountains with the faith of a mustard seed, you can drink poison and it won't hurt you, and you can handle deadly snakes without being harmed.

Anyone looking to the Bible for anything more than an ancient Jewish Puppet Play does so at his

Alan G. Hanson

ED. NOTE: This is all very interesting, except for one fact that progressive priests and ministers have pointed out: Jesus never men-tioned the word, "homosexual," in the Bible. The first anti-gay posture of the church, many scholars believe, was set by the venomous St.

We Do NOT 'All Have AIDS'

* Halt the Press!

In the December 4 publication on page 18 there is an ad by STOP AIDS Project with "We all have AIDS" in large bold print.

I strongly urge Bob Hoffman and the STOP AIDS Project to go back to school.

"No — many of us do not have AIDS" and this ad is an affrontament to all.

This ghetto scare tactic is nothing new and hope-fully will be rejected by the majority as a feeble attempt to lay guilt on us all for some more money.

Truth in advertisement is a must legally, morally and for the advertiser to continue in business.

The B.A.R. has shown irresponsibility in allowing this particular ad and hopefully this type of lie will be edited from future publications.

AIDS Volunteer Appreciation Day

★ You forgot to list AIDS volunteers with whom I have the most touching experience. They dedicate their love and time to Persons with AIDS, to their lovers and family and stay with them until they die. I am speaking of the AIDS Project of Hospice here in San Francisco.

Although many of our friends who have left us have been lucky to experience the loving care of Hospice, one hears so little about them. Since you also neglected to mention them, I want to take this opportunity to thank all of them from the depth of my heart. I want to include the wonderful nurses who also volunteer many unpaid hours and the attendants who, with so much love and skill, fulfill their often extremely difficult job. (A friend said that only a fool or a saint will do this work for the minimum wage

I'd be overwhelmingly remiss if I didn't imme-* I'd be overwhelmingly remiss if I didn't immediately tell you how much I thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity to attend "The Buddy Connection — A Safe Sex Workshop," sponsored by the S.F. AIDS Foundation. If there was one word that would describe the three hour experience — it would be "awareness!" Sure we have all read the literature, heard the facts, and experienced some kind of frustration with the whole idea and concept of Safe Sex. This particular workshop provided an unusual and open forum for forty individuals (plus) to actively interact and discuss their individual ideas, feelings, emotions, and reactions to today's acceptable standards. Together we explored numerous ideas and creative aspects to making safe sex — "Hot Sex."

Steve Speier and Dave Lourea facilitated the work-shop — kept it moving on target, and created an atmosphere supportive of the attendees. Their enthusiasm was contagious. Participants actively opened up, and shared their utmost intimate thoughts, fantasies, and opinions. Both men were masters at keeping the group's attention and at conducting the workshop — making the workshop truly enjoyable for all.

The workshop successfully raised the awareness and importance of safe sex in the '80s, supporting the needs of the gay community. Forty men left that night committed to the idea of spreading the word and richer for the experience. A secondary value, but just as important, was the fact that a lot of new friend-ships were created.

Bravo to Steve and Dave for a job well done! They are a Dynamic Duo, that far exceeded any expecta-tion I had when I entered the workshop. "The Bud-dy Connection Workshop" is offered every other Monday. I would highly recommend this workshop and enjoyable evening to any member of our com-munity. Who knows . . . you might even meet some-body special who meets your highest expectation!

Hitler In 1938? JP II In 1987?

★ It's not too early to think of things to do to keep * It's not too early to think of things to do to keep the Pope from visiting San Francisco next year — for reasons that have nothing at all to do with reli-gion. East Bay Episcopalians

★ A search for an East Bay Episcopal parish church which offers a comfortable environment for out-ofthe-closet gay men and women is more easily said

Unwittingly, parishes are almost exclusively orientated towards heterosexual persons — especially parents, their young children, and widows and widowers. Gay men and women are odd persons out.

Openly gay Eastbayites who are anxious to find a comfortable liturgical parish church this Christ-mastide may wish to check out for themselves The Episcopal Church of St. James the Apostle on 12th Avenue at Foothill Boulevard in Oakland's Brooklyn, Gertrude Stein's very own Oakland neighborhood.

Founded in 1858 as a chapel-of-ease to St. John's Church in Oakland, St. James' Church has long been the oldest surviving Episcopal parish and church building in Oakland and probably in the East Bay.

Its present 1887 Victorian Carpenter Gothic church echoes the basic architectural truth that beauty is always found in simplicity, in proportional balances, and in stylistic unity.

St. James' welcoming mat for gay men and women should be common knowledge in the Bay Area's gay community, where a Choral Eucharist is celebrated at 11 a.m. each Sunday.

What I Didn't Buy For Christmas

ike it or not, Christmas is the most commercialized of holidays, and complaining about it is just so much crying in the wind — there is nothing you can to about it. Although this disturbs me as much as anyone, I learned a long time ago simply to give in and go with the flow. It makes life so much easier.

Nevertheless, I still resent being told what to buy by insatiable merchants who can't hear the carolers for the cash registers. Therefore, I get particular satisfaction from passing up certain items which I am told are indispensible. This was the case last week when, browsing through the Sunday paper, I found a plethora of possibilities which I was pleased to spurn.

Although the shopping season is now officially over, I thought I'd share with you the things I didn't buy for Christmas. If I offend you by belittling your favorite gift items, forgive me. The important thing is that I haven't offended our advertisers. (In fact, I highly recommend phone sex gift certificates for next season's special someones. Believe it or not, you could do a hell of a lot worse.)

FOR THE KIDDIES

Robbie the Robot ($21.95): Mind you, I've got nothing against robots. In fact, I think they're great. But I bought last year's model of Robbie for one of my nephews, and it broke within a day. I'm sorry, but I expect a little more for my hard-earned dollar, even from Radio Shack. G.I. Joe Army Fatigue "Playwear" ($5.99-87.99): I realize we are living in Ronald "Rambo" Reagan's America, folks, but really — do we need to indoctrinate our children at such a young and tender age? I don't know about you, but if I had kids, I wouldn't want them to grow up to be "freedom fighters."

Teddy Ruxpin, Storytelling Teddy Bear (869.99): I hate cute. Furthermore, Moms and Dads ought to do their own storytelling rather than leave it to a talking bear.

The Ghostbusters Game ($14.99): The movie was awful. Can the game possibly be any batter?

FOR MY SISTERS

Fur Coats ($659-$1,299): Maybe I do eat red meat, and maybe blue foxes and mins aren't endangered species, but I still don't like the idea of people wearing dead animal skins to impress their friends. Shame, shame on Maçois.

Norelco Ladies' Shaver ($19.99): I like hairy legs, even on women. Besides, I refuse to believe that an electric shaver can tell the difference between men's legs and women's. (Or is the distinction here between women's legs and "ladies"?)

Padded Coat Hangers ($18): Sorry, Joan, but wire hangers are good enough for me — and for the women in my family.

Microwave Ovens ($88-$399): Even if my neighbors, Mike and Duke, swear by them, spare me. I guess I'm just an old fashioned girl.

Cuisinart ($110-$225): So unnecessary, and too hard to

FOR MY BROTHERS-IN-LAW:

Jockey Elance Skants Briefs (Three pair, $12): Pink panties for men? You've got to be kidding. Whatever happened to the good ol' days, when a man was a man, and a transvestite was ... well, a man?

Velour Warm-Up Suits ($33-$48): Even my brothers-inlaw wouldn't wear velour these days.

Men's Cologne ($15-$60): Fuck The Butch Manual. I never did like perfume on men—or on women either, for that matter. But I suppose I should count my blessings. At least Emporium doesn't sell patchouli oil.

Designer Jeans ($25-$35): I'll swear by 501's 'til my dying day. Anything else is an abomination.

Fullback Three-Way Vinyl Recliner ($349.98): Maybe it does wipe clean with a damp sponge, but I don't think my brothers-in-law would appreciate it. Hell, they don't even watch football games.

FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

Lifelike Christmas Trees ($99.99-$149.99): Maybe they don't need watering, but give me the real thing any day.

Talking Toast Molds ($2):
"Our talking toast molds let you start mornings with a smile. Just press onto bread, then toast an edible greeting." No thanks. The last thing I want to see in the morning is a Happy Face on my raisin bread.

Decorator Telephones ($39.96-$74.95): Tacky, tacky, tacky, especially the Imperial Classique model.

Jean Auel's The Earthchildren Series—Boxed Set ($12.99): Got a year or two to waste? Be my guest. (Sorry, Cave Bear fans.)

Beep 'n Keep Keychain ($20): "Beeps when you clap." Too Twilight Zone. I mean, this is scary. Anyway, when I clap my hands, I want Nubian slaves to appear, not keychains.

Telescopes ($100-$300):
Sure, they look great in the living room, but has anybody ever used one after the first week or so? And has anybody ever used one to look at the stars? I mean, if you must peek in people's bedrooms, go right ahead, but a word of advice first — dirty magazines are cheaper.

27" Sony Trinitron TV ($950): Listen, I watch I Love Lucy reruns too, but I don't devote half my living room and a large part of my income to a TV set, for God's sake. A little moderation, please.

eration, please.

Sony Walkman ($35-$160):
Sorry, but I just don't believe in 'em. Granted, they're a vast improvement over ghetto blasters, but I still think they're antisocial. By allowing people to wrap themselves in artificially-created environments, they cut people off from one another. Besides, they make people look like bugs with things coming out of their ears.

Pool Table ($699.99): Tom

Pool Table ($699.99): Tom Cruise may be as cute as they come, but pool just ain't my game, or anybody else's in the family.

Gym Equipment ($99.98-$349.99): Ride a bike instead of a cycle machine, buy a boat instead of a rowing machine, or join a gym and get social. But don't buy crap like this. It'll only rust in the basement.

Zschau Campaign Continues

even weeks after Sen. Alan Cranston squeaked out a 116,622 vote margin over Ed Zschau, in one of the state's closest Senate elections, political observers are saying that Cranston's one percent margin may have resulted from the votesplitting efforts of a coalescence of political forces.

Fundamentalist Christian conservatives regarded Zschau's views on abortion, gay rights and other issues as too moderate. Certain wealthy Jewish contributors in the southern part of the state were concerned that the congressman would not be a strong enough supporter of Israel and desperately wanted Cranston re-elected. Consequently, both groups quietly got behind the effort of Edward Vallen, the little-known candidate representing the right wing American Independent Party who ended up receiving nearly 110,000 votes in the election.

Vallen acknowledged receiving $120,000 in contributions from Jewish donors working, in fact, to re-elect Cranston. Most of the money in the minor party candidate's campaign came directly or indirectly from Michael Goland, a wealthy right-wing Californian who in 1984 contributed $400,000 and helped raise more in a successful effort to defeat another moderate Republican incumbent, Charles Percy of Illinois. As chair of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Percy was viewed by some American Jews as not sympathetic enough to Israel.

Supporters of such right-wing Republicans as H.L. Richardson proudly take credit for Zschau's defeat. Most of them voted for either Vallen or Cranston. Many ultra-conservatives used the theory that Cranston might not complete his six-year term, and Gov. George Deukmejian might ultimately have the opportunity to appoint someone they view as more acceptable than Ed Zschau. Richardson, a power in California right-wing politics, openly urged his supporters to split their tickets by voting for Deukmejian, and then switching to another candidate for senator.

Zschau was assuring California voters again this week that he would be back. He says he will run again for senator in 1992 and will be devoting about a fifth of his time until then to public issues in an effort to keep his name before the state's voters.

Legal Defense and Education Fund commented that the decision has sent "the message that parents who happen to be gay have the same rights to custody and visitation as other parents."

In a 14-page decision, Judge Morton I. Willen rejected arguments that the father's homosexuality would adversely affect the boy. Justice Willen wrote, "The record indicates that the boy fared far better with his father than with his mother. The court finds no evidence of any present or potential harm upon which to make the father's homosexuality a consideration in this custody dispute."

Legal observers in New York said this was the first time they can recall a gay parent being awarded custody when the homosexual parent lived with his or her lover.

GGBA Foundation SetTo Disburse Funds

The GGBA Foundation will distribute the remainder of a $3 million fund to be created by Pacific Bell to compensate gay and lesbian job applicants and employees who were discriminated against on the basis of sexual orientation.

In the settlement of an 11-year-old suit brought by gay rights organizatons and individuals, Pacific Bell will ask an independent arbitrator to review the claims of those who believe they were discriminated against before the telephone company changed its policy in late 1980 to prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. Individuals will be compensated from the fund, based on the arbitrator's evaluation of each

Any money remaining in the fund after all claims are resolved will be given to the GGBA Foundation for subsequent distribution to organizations serving lesbians and gay men throughout California

The GGBA Foundation has made grants totaling $5,300 to six organizations serving the lesbian and gay community of the Bay Area in its Winter 1986 granting cycle. They are:

WOMAN, Inc., $1,500, for general support of the first conference on lesbian violence;

Community United Against Violence, $1,000, for a portion of the salary of a volunteer coordinator:

Film Arts Foundation, $1,000, for promotion and distribution of "Not All Parents Are Straight," a film which examines aspects of the gay/lesbian parent-child relationship;

Operation Concern, $1,000 matching grant, for staff training in "brief term" and group psychotherapy techniques;

Necessities and More, $500, for promotional brochure production, and purchase of nutritional supplements and personal hospital supplies for people with AIDS in the South Bay; and G40 Plus Club, $300, for newsletter distribution and general support.

Founded in 1979 by the Golden Gate Business Association, the GGBA Foundation is the oldest and largest lesbian and gay philanthropic organization in the country. To date, the foundation has awarded $106,000 in grants to 100 organizations.

'Sissy' Study Debunked For Sex Stereotyping

Male, Female Roles Narrowly Defined by Society; Assumptions Behind Research Taint Conclusions

by George Mendenhall

A gay psychologist and a former member of a gay liberation "sissy caucus" denounced a recent study that claimed extremely effeminate boys tend to become homosexual. Authored by Dr. Richard Green, the study concluded that 33 out of 44 effeminate boys grew up to be gay and that professional counseling and parental influence could not deter these children from becoming homosexual. Martin Stow, a local gay psychotherapist, and Tede Mathews, a writer and feminist, questioned the assumptions behind the study.

Green identified the boys as being "extremely effeminate" because they were inept in athletics, preferred music to cars, had difficulty making friends with other boys, rejected "rough and tumble" games, played with dolls, and mimicked their mother's activities

"The research," Stow responded, "is based on the assumption that we have had for decades — that there is an association between male homosexuality and femaleness. Our definition of childhood behavior is too narrow. We polarize the behavior as to what is 'masculine' or 'feminine'. We do not allow for diversity. For example, Green claims that it is feminine to 'play house' — but what about the heterosexual house husbands, who perform household chores and care for children?"

Mathews, who appeared in the film Word Is Out discussing his early effeminacy, was disturbed when he saw a San Francisco Chronicle article (Dec. 16) about the book. "What is acceptable as male and female is shoved down our throats when we are kids," said Mathews. "Society thinks it will run more smoothly if the roles are clearly defined with mommy staying at home and daddy going to work. It creates the hierarchy early — where the male dominates. For example, I can recall knowing that it was not "masculine" to want to cook and how my mother said it was o.k. because so many great chefs were men."

Green's study, The Sissy Boy Syndrome and the Development of Homosexuality, will be published in February.

While Stow did not object to the preview of the study being published in the Chronicle, he believed that many who scan its contents will feel that Green validates the old stereotypes. "The use of the word 'sissy' immediately connotates a socially unacceptable condition. It says that gay boys are social rejects and associates them with girls. It says that stepping out of the stereotypical roles is wrong;" said Stow.

Mathews added, "To many who read this, it reaffirms the old stereotype that gay men are effeminate. I feel for the young boys now growing up who are effeminate."

Two researchers were pleased that the Green research pointed to possible genetic origins of homosexuality. Dr. Alan Bell, of the Kinsey Institute, said the report verifies an institute study that "a very important physiological component plays a big role in determining one's sexual identity."

Dr. Judd Marmor, professor emeritus of psychiatry at the University of Southern California, said, "Society tends to treat male homosexuals as if they had a choice about their sexual orientation, when in fact they have no more choice about how they develop than heterosexuals do."

Stow said he is exasperated by the many studies of homosexuality — and the notable absense of studies of male heterosexuality. He believes "This particular study is inappropriate because it deals with the extreme. On the one hand, children are forced into these polarized positions and then they are studied in order to draw conclusions."

Mathews, when he first saw the newspaper review, wondered, "Another study? Why did Green spend 15 years on this? I wonder if in this period of conservativism, we are going to again hear 'Is there a cure for it?""

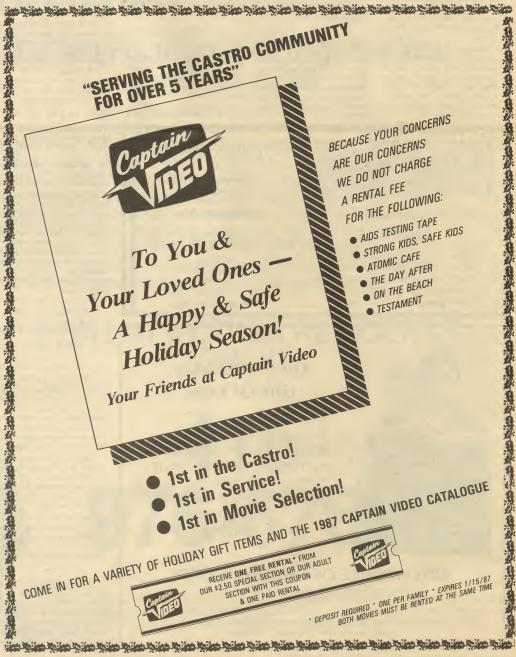

NO CHOICES

Researcher Green claims that often the father rejects the effeminate child creating relationship problems. Is it rejection just by the father? Stow responded, "The child also makes a selection as to who he wants to associate with. When he is confronted with a very aggressive father he may very well reject him. That is why we get two brothers who have very different descriptions of their relationships with their father."

Review

The U.S. Supreme Court ripped the doors off our homes and ped the doors off our homes and decreed that gay citizens have less of a right to privacy than other Americans. The high court's ruling put the lie to the words inscribed at the front of its very chamber: "EQUAL JUSTICE UNDER THE LAW."

Gov. George Deukmejian again slashed half the state funds to fight AIDS, even as our loved ones suffered and died all around us. While his cruelty was no sur-prise, it was an outrage nonethe-less, ripping open an old wound for the third year in a row.

And lawyers at the oddly named Justice Department said employers could discriminate against people with AIDS—if those employers had a fear of AIDS.

Through it all, the fear of AIDS was being peddled by a well organized group headed by paranoid kook Lyndon LaRouche. For a time, it looked as though LaRouche might convince Californians to pass an AIDS quarantine initiative. A few gay people fled California until after the election, for fear that Prop. 64 would pass. would pass.

The L.A. Gay Men's Chorus wins the honor of keynoting a choral convention in San Jose. Judges chose the L.A. gay singers in a "blind" competition, using coded recording tapes.

Officers of the American Choral Directors Association gag when they find they have chosen that chorus. They demand that the L.A. singers strike "gay" from their name,

The chorus refuses and sues, and wins. Moral: Go forth with a song in your heart and a lawsuit in your back pocket.

At San Francisco General Hos pital, a study of an exotic AIDS drug is abruptly canceled. Many had hoped that the drug Suramin would prove to be an AIDS cure. Instead, Suramin often proves to be as dangerous as AIDS itself.

The 25 men in the study group suffer kidney, adrenal and liver failure. The drug may well have hastened the death of some of

Bike-a-Thon Raises $250,000

In 1985, the first AIDS Bike-a-Thon drew only about 30 cyclists. This year's event on May 3 saw 650 cyclists ride either 100 miles or 25 miles — some of it in rain — to raise over $250,000 in pledges for eight Bay Area AIDS service organizations. By year's end, at least 90 percent of those pledges had been collected, bringing in $226,000 for direct services to people with AIDS. (Photo: Mick Hicks)

HARVARD TEAM INACTIVATES AIDS VIRUS

'The virus was not only slowed down, it was stopped."

- Dr. William Haseltine

The Suramin fiasco underscores that in the front lines of the war against AIDS, there will be casualties. Those who suffered in the Suramin study rightly take their places as heroes of the epiHopeful headlines appear at the same time. The Harvard Medical School announces that it has found a way to inactivate the AIDS virus-without using toxic drugs such as Suramin.

Harvard researchers identify a gene unique to the AIDS virus. This "transactivator" gene, the researchers say, causes the incredibly rapid multiplication of the AIDS virus once the virus has invaded a healthy immune cell.

The Harvard team shows how to remove the "transactivator gene and disable the virus. "Th virus was not only slowed down, it was stopped," says Harvard's Dr. William Haseltine. The research has profound implica-tions for development of a vaccine, and perhaps a cure.

Meanwhile, Dr. Jay Levy of the University of California-San Francisco also has hopeful news on AIDS. Levy finds that a person who was infected with AIDS has eliminated the virus from his body, without medical treatment.

This finding indicates that the AIDS antibody is sometimes effective against the AIDS virus. Until now, those testing positive for the AIDS antibody had most-ly faced despair. This new devel-opment hints that having antidies could be a hopeful sign, and that one's body can do what science so far cannot: stop the AIDS virus.

"contact tracing" is Such common for venereal diseases in order to find people and cure them. With no cure in sight for AIDS, Mason's proposal appears to be more of an effort to isolate people who have been exposed to AIDS, than to help them.

But why shouldn't we trust Dr. Mason?

After all, the devout Mormon once headed the infamous Tusblack men with syphillis were not told they had the disease and were left untreated for many years, so the CDC could study the long-term effects of syphillitic infection.

By the way, Dr. Mason should not be confused with the James Mason who starred with Judy Garland in the 1954 classic, A Star is Born. Although we do wish Dr. Mason would take a

Another thing. Let's clean upyour language out there. The White House tells the federal Centers for Disease Control to eliminate "sexually explicit" language from AIDS prevention materials.

This presents a problem. How do you tell people to avoid a sexually transmitted disease without discussing sex? This inane question holds up $20 million—that's million—in AIDS education funds for most of the year.

Local poohbahs travel to Washington, D.C. to lobby for AIDS funds. Pres. Reagan is pushing a $51 million cut in funds from Congress's $244 million AIDS budget. And Reagan is proposing to limit such spending in fiscal 1987 to $213 million.

Board of Sups. Pres. John Molinari, Sup. Harry Britt, AIDS Foundation executive director Tim Wolfred and B.A.R. Publisher Bob Ross spend a week at the Capitol lobbying Congress. In response to that and other similar pressures, Congress rebuffs Reagan and appropriates more than $400 million.

The good news is, she looks great in stripes. Former Mayor of West Hollywood Valerie Terrigno, an upfront lesbian, is convicted of embezzling $7,000. A federal jury finds that Terrigno dipped into a gay job counseling fund which she once headed. She faces up to five years in prison.

Later, in April, Terrigno is sentenced to 60 days in a halfway house, 1,000 hours of community service, and is ordered to repay $6,800.

"Should somebody have stopped this man from spreading AIDS?" That is the question asked by the Public Broadcasting Service. Gays in S.F. respond, "Should somebody stop KQED from spreading lies?"

KQED airs an inflammatory but muddled documentary about the last days of a gay black man dying of AIDS. The program implies that Fabian Bridges was a prostitute and that he was sexually active in Cleveland and Houston even though he knew he had AIDS.

But imply is all the documentary does. PBS and KQED admit they don't have all the facts. "Bridges moves from city to city, claiming that he's living promiscuously," says PBS in its press packet. Says KQED-FM radio, "Bridges (is) a homosexual prostitute who alleges he had sex with six partners a night."

The Houston vice squad follows Bridges surreptitiously for three days, but fails to find him having sex. This fact is omitted from the PBS documentary.

And Dr. Mervyn Silverman, former S.F. Health Director, says that Bridges may be suffering from organic brain syndrome—a cruel AIDS-related infection which prevents its victims from knowing what is real and what is not.

The icing on the cake comes when the producer of the series, Mike Sullivan of Minneapolis, says in an interview that there is a "legitimate question" whether Bridges made up stories in order to get petty cash, food and lodging from the PBS film crew which followed him from Ohio to Texas.

Producers Sullivan says that no one can say for sure that Bridges was ever a prostitute. Yet, throughout the Bridges embroglio and to this day, KQED refers to Fabian Bridges as "the AIDS prostitute."

Facts or no, the PBS special fans the flames of AIDS hysteria from Texas to California.

Remember the Texas quarantine? That came about after Texas local media covered the Fabian Bridges affair—during the filming of the PBS special.

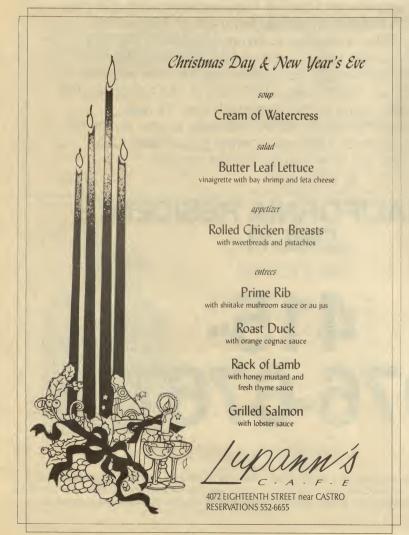

In California, the Fabian Bridges special is watched closely by PANIC—a Lyndon LaRouche outfit that is gathering signatures to put AIDS quarantine on the fall ballot. The PBS show helps the LaRouchites to spread their campaign of fear—and get their needed signatures.

Gay activists in S.F. catch the fire and besiege KQED with an angry demonstration. In the aftermath, a coalition of community groups announces a boycott of KQED and PBS.

Activists agree to withdraw from a panel show which follows the Fabian Bridges special. But one, person with AIDS, Bobby Reynolds, breaks the boycott and goes on the air. Almost. KQED gives him nine seconds at the end of the broadcast.

Scott Blakey, TV critic for the San Francisco Chronicle, calls the gay activists who are protesting KQED "a bunch of bozos." The Chronicle, meanwhile, refuses in its obituaries to print the names of lovers of people who have died of AIDS.

struggle. "Pandemonium broke out in the gallery and one hundred of us stood up, applauding, cheering, crying, embracing one another," said N.Y. gay activist Steve Ault.

Mayor Ed Koch was a big pusher of the bill. The Roman Catholic Archdiocese, orthodox Jews and the Salvation Army (ring those chimes) poured money, volunteers and influence into the battle against the bill.

The vote for the bill is unexpectedly large: 21-14. Says Mayor Koch, "Fifteen years is too long to deny the promise of equal protection to those who are so clearly the victims of discrimination."

Sacramento, a nice city with only one name, also passes a gay rights bill. The vote is 7-2 with City Council's two Republicans opposed.

The Bay Area Reporter is first to report on a fringe group, associated with Lyndon LaRouche, that is gathering signatures for an AIDS quarantine initiative. Bruce Decker, the gay Republican who is Gov. Deukmejian's closest gay adviser on AIDS, says the LaRouche threat is something to take seriously.

APRIL: BUMPED AGAIN

A jury in Lewiston, Maine, finds a gay man not guilty for shooting and killing a teenage attacker. A group of teens regularly taunted Robert Gravel, 35, at his home. Gravel borrowed a .22 calibre pistol for protection.

"I wanted to keep on living," Gravel says. Says one of the youths who taunted him, "I'd smash any homo... because they are gay. Weird. Sick."

Keep your powder dry.

Armistead Maupin is bounced from the San Francisco Chronicle. Editors say that Maupin's latest "Tales of the City" serial won't be published anywhere else because The Chron "is the gay paper."

Maupin walks across the hall to the Examiner and they print the series.

The state health director, Dr. Ken Kizer, shocks AIDS experts by urging mandatory testing for the AIDS antibody.

Responds spokeswoman Holly Smith of the S.F. AIDS Foundation, "The tests are not a diagnostic tool—but it points to quarantining and isolating people who test positive."

This last point is not lost on the followers of Lyndon LaRouche. Kizer's statement helps them gather the 400,000 signatures they need to get their quarantine initiative on the fall ballot.

Pres. Reagan—uh—clears the air about his stand on equal rights for gay people.

Says the Pres., "I am one who believes in the rights of the individual—individual freedom—and I do have to question sometimes whether individual rights are being defended in this particular field ... or whether they are demanding an acceptance ... for example, should a teacher in a classroom be invoking their personal habits and advocating them to their students?"

But Reagan adds, "I don't want them discriminated against simply on the basis as to housing and jobs and so forth. I, on the other hand, don't want to give them privileges beyond what the rest of us have."

Aren't we glad that is perfectly clear. And on the other hand, I have five fingers.

Hot on Santa's Trail

Catch the Spirit-Go Shopping!

by Peter Brown

t happened too fast this year. I blinked my eyes twice, and WHAM! I was one year older, not one whit wiser, too many pounds heavier, and there it was—Christmas—coming at me downhill, like a runaway behemoth, crushing my spirits, flattening my wallet, and blowing my time management schemes all to hell.

Less than a week into the joyous season, I decided that December, not April, is the cruelest month of them all. The cold comes, the rain chills my bones, and the wind blows in my ear, not sweet promises of things to come, but melancholy, almost mocking reminders from the Ghost of Christmas Past.

"You think too much," Rick teases. He tosses me my cap. "Get your coat, Grumbles! We're going to do some real Christmas shopping and see if we can't get you over this."

"That's just what I need," I answer, "to go out and spend my way into the Christmas spirit!" I change into my puddle-walking shoes and pull on a sweater, muttering about the cold, the wet, and having to wear too many clothes.

One childhood Christmas Eve, bundled against the cold and the falling snow that was already six inches deep, Iran, as best I could, to get home. My uncle had given me a shiny, new quarter and I held it tightly in my mitten as I ran. I stumbled, fell, and dropped the quarter in the snow. I searched for it in the darkness, crying, until I was too cold to continue.

Neither my mother's warming touch nor my father's replacement coin could ease my despair at knowing that I had lost forever the special quarter given me by my favorite uncle.

Secretly, I'm happy that Rick is pushing me, happy knowing that if nothing else works, I can always buy myself a better mood.

It doesn't take long. Three and a half moments after entering the Christmas tree lot by Safeway, I am hot on Santa's trail. I smell Christmas all around me. Umbrellas are bobbing between stands of wonderfully green pines, and tree-hawkers smack their gloved hands together to keen warm.

There is obvious spirit here—a lesbian couple, four gay guys checking out a tree, a poppa with an ecstatic boy riding his shoulders, men wearing yellow slickers, enthusiastically pounding tree-stands into place.

A hot-looking lady sidles toward the handsome man selling trees. "You sure you can't come down on the price?" she begs. Her boyfriend encourages her, laughing. "Get a little closer to him, honey! He's getting weak!"

Then I see Chip, looking for the right wreath. It puts a smile on my face, as it always does, to run into someone I know on the street. We hug, laughing at the foolishness of our standing in the rain to buy a Christmas tree. Rick waves us over, holding up his pick of the trees. "What about this one?" he calls. "Isn't this the perfect tree?"

I nod my assent, teasing, "Snuggle up to that dude over there, and maybe he'll drop the price for you too!" Rick is amused, but for Chip's sake, he apes his best frown.

Heading for the Castro, I'm feeling so much better, I don't even grumble about the traffic and the impossibility of parking. My right foot, feeling the cold, begins to tap out a warming fa-la-la. We park and head for the card shops and find that we are not alone. The aisles are packed with shoppers, searching for the right card with the perfect sentiment to express their hope for the holiday season.

The worst in us surfaces as Rick and I giggle at a card with unquestionably racist overtones. We buy Peace-on-Earth cards for our mothers, bare-assed boy cards for our friends, and somewhere-in-between cards for everyone else on our list.

In front of another shop, an Irish setter is waiting, with wet impatience, for its owner. I take a picture and try to establish rapport. The setter ignores me.

walking up the street, we notice a small gathering around the Hibernia tree. The boys are putting the final touches on it. "There's a bald spot on this side!" one of them shouts. Someone in the crowd counters quickly, "Put a hat on it!" Everyone shares a laugh, and I'm grateful for the wonderfully self-effacing humor that seems unique to gay men.

Pressing on, we search for the right present for Rick's Aunt Myrtle, for Danny and Tereza, for John, for Carol. Watching the kittens in the mobile adopt-a-pet display, we decide for the seventh or eighth time to get a cat, a Christmas kitty to help warm our home. But Rick is not fully convinced, unless, of course, I can promise it will be a picture-book cat, like Quito.

"Will a cat shed and get hair on my clothes?" Rick asks. "How will it know to use its box? Will it ruin the furniture? How will we teach it to go through the catdoor to the back porch? Won't it be a lot of trouble?"

I turn philosophical. "Life's a lot of trouble," I offer. "Everything we desire has to be caredfor. Whatever it is, one has to wash it, feed it, clean it, pick up after it, keep it in a garage, fill it with gas, repair it or take it to the vet. Inevitably, it may still pee on the floor!"

"But Sweets!" Rick laughs. "Cat-hair on my Calvin's?"

Nearly asleep, I'm remembering the rest of my childhood
Christmas Eve trauma—waking Christmas morning to find on my dresser a shiny quarter and a note: "Found this in the snow, and knew it was yours. Merry Christmas, and be good!" Signed: "S.C."

At another Christmas years later, an older sister would admit to having conspired with an older brother to write that note. I remember it every Christmas, and it always makes me feel silly and selfish. It also helps me know that in spite of myself, I'll survive this Christmas, and many, many

Just one viewing of the new educational video, All Hands on Dick, should silence forever the complaint that safer sex can't be hot.

All Hands on Dick, the jack-off party video, was produced by the Exodus Trust, a California nonprofit organization, and the Institute for Advance Study of Human Sexuality, a San Francisco-based graduate school that trains sexologists. The video presents a sexual alternative that is very hot, exciting and safe. Developed under the direction of Clark Taylor, Ph.D., as part of the Institute's AIDS Education Series, it is informative, sexpositive, and fun to watch. It could give you some new ideas to spice up your sex life, and be safe, too.

All Hands on Dick runs 40 minutes in length, and is available by mail order for $29.95 plus $2.50 postage through the Exodus Trust, 1523 Franklin St., San Francisco, CA 94109. Specify VHS or Beta.

'Sissy'

Stow added, "The child is taught to be like daddy. But what if you do not want to be like daddy? That doesn't mean that the hetero boy would not like to play with the Barbie doll. But he must reflect the wishes of his parents. I wonder what 'masculine' young boys would be like if they felt they had more choices?"

Green suggests that fathers might help the child develop a sense of maleness by taking him to the zoo or a concert, rather than insisting that he take part in athletic events. Stow said this seems supportive on the surface, in emphasizing that if a child thinks for himself, he may develop a sense of maleness and be less prone to become homosexual.

The researcher discovered that some effeminate children wear their mother's clothes and say they wish they were girls. Stow responded, "That is because we narrowly define for the child what is masculine. This forces such children to assume that they must be the opposite — female. The child has no latitude and it is not until later in life that he realizes that he has more choices."

Stow believed Green's research was flawed because ''He is trying to show that 'sissy boys' are associated with homosexuality without knowing what masculine factors are associated with homosexuality. He should be talking about boys who have diversified activity rather than calling them 'sissies.' We must demand our diversity — in spite of all the stereotypical conditions around us. There is also the suggestion that if we change these conditions a child will become heterosexual. The worst thing that is done is to associate fealeness with homosexuality when there are so many other factors.

William Horner

William Horner, 32, a Castro Dis-trict resident, died on Dec. 4 of AIDS-related complications. He is survived by his lover, David Hebert, his parents and sister, who live in Rhode Island, and his brother, who lives in Southern California.

Horner was a restoration designer, specializing in Victorian buildings. His most recent major project was the exterior restoration of the Majestic Hotel in San Francisco. A resident of the city for six years, Horner re-located to San Francisco from Newport, Rhode Island.

Two weeks before his death, on Nov. 20, Horner became one of the first claimants in an AIDS-related insurance case to win a settlement. Horner's insurance company agreed to provide him with full benefits under his policy and with monthly payments for the rest of his life. Other payments for the rest of his life. Other settlement terms have not been disclosed. Horner had sued the company for failure to pay his medical bills after he was diagnosed vith AIDS in July of 1985. Horner sait, at the time of the settlement that he hoped it would "send a message to other people that they can also get their benefits if they fight for them." Earlier he had commented, "I want to help others who may be going through this. I want to make a con-

At Mr. Horner's request a memorial service was held with his family in Rhode Island. Donations in his memory can be sent to the Shanti Project in San Francisco.

Memorial services were held for Bill on Saturday, Dec. 13, at Most Holy Redeemer Church. Bill had Holy Redeemer Church. Bill had passed away on Dec. 11 after a seven-month battle with AIDS. At his serv-ices, before a long gathering of fam-ily and friends, Bill was accurately eulogized as "always being a gentle-man".

The son of Marie Kiefer and the late Frank Coates, Bill was born in New York City on Sept. 5, 1943. In 1970, he moved to San Francisco where Francisco where he became a he became a bartender at the Boot Camp. After a few years there, Bill "Quantas" Coates, as he became known, moved on to the Ramrod. In 1974, Bill's fame and reputation in San Francisco grew when he won the title of Mr. CMC Carnival. He remained at the Ramrod until 1979 when he joined the Arena. As bartender, and then Assistant Manager, Bill helped the staff of the Arena make it one of the most successful bars ever in the South of Market area. In 1983, Bill rejoined his South of Market "bar" family by becoming bartender at the SF Eagle. It is the Eagle which Bill last graced with his pleasant smile and caring personality.

Bill leaves a brother, Frank, five hews, and one niece. Bill's m Marie, has become a special person to many of the South of Market men to many of the South of Market men over the years since she moved to San Francisco to join Bill. Chester Walley

Chester Leon Walley, known as Chester Leon Walley, known as Leon by his friends, entered into rest peacefully on Saturday, Dec. 13, in his Concord home. At his bedside was his lover Mark Cohen, and Leon's parents, Paul and Marie Walley of Mississippi. He is survived by his sister Deborah Anne Ragas of Mississippi, and his brother Paul Richard Walley of New York. He leaves behind five nieces and three nephews.

Leon was born in Oregon and raised in Mississippi, being an active member in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Leon moved to San Francisco in 1979 and then to Concord in 1984 where he lived for the last two and a half years. Leon worked for Delta Dental of California as a dental claims examiner for five years.

Small graveside services were held on Tuesday, Dec. 16, at Oakmont Memorial Park.

Leon will be missed by all those whose lives were touched by his friendship.

COUNTY OF ALAMEDA ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

East Bay Vigil

There's a new vigil in the Bay Area, over at the Alameda County Administration Building. Oakland mayor Lionel Wilson has sent a Christmas card to vigilers Jack Hanna and J.C. Keller while Rep. Ron Dellums has told them 'to keep up the good work.'

Sups. To Reconsider Vote On AIDS Funds

East Bay Pours Out Support For Vigilers

by Charles Linebarger

Jack Hanna and J.C. Keller who chained themselves to the doors of the Alameda County Administrative Building in Oakland on Tuesday, Dec. 16, are still at their post a week later. The two now share a tent at the site and take turns running an AIDS information table next to the tent. A huge sign in front of their tent proclaims Oakland HIV Vigil.

The Alameda County Sheriff's Department has apparently taken a hands off attitude toward the protest. Local politicians have so far been supportive of the vigilers' goals.

Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson has sent Hanna and Keller a Christmas card. U.S. Congressman Ron Dellums, who represents Berkeley and Oakland in Washington, has also sent the two a letter of support.

"I applaud your move of the campaign from San Francisco to Alameda County," wrote Delums, "specifically to Oakland, as an important step in notifying people and officials in our city of the dramatic needs here at home. Keep up the good work."

At least one supervisor on the Alameda County Board of Supervisors has had a change of heart on the AIDS appropriation bill that led to the creation of the Oakland vigil a week ago. Sup. John George told the Bay Area Reporter that he felt a new vote on the AIDS appropriation bill could be taken within the next

On the vigil itself, George said, "I think it's something that had to be done. I think they are representing and standing in for a whole lot of people and therefore I feel sad that they have to be there in the first place."

"It (the funding vote the supervisors postponed on Dec. 16) was going to come back before the board on Jan. 27," added George. "One thing I'm sure of is that the matter can be accelerated and advanced to the first week in January. I'm not happy about it. The $50,000 is needed now to put things in place and if we wait over a month, it delays that and people are dying in the interim."

At the Vigil site itself, Keller and Hanna told the B.A.R. that the tent where they now spend much of their time was donated by the patrons of the Paradise Bar and Grill, an Oakland bar located across the street from the Alameda County building, on 12th Street.

As for food, keller said, "Fred Corella, Mama Chuckles or Francis at the Paradise Bar and Grill bring over a warm dinner, lunch or breakfast every day. They bring over coffee, too. And other people around here bring over coffee and juice, too."

"Some women who work for the county brought us our sleeping bag, table, kerosene lamp and clothes," continued Keller. "And nurses from the Alameda County Hospital brought us pillows. Mama Chuckles (of the Paradise Bar and Grill) comes over constantly and keeps sending guys over to visit us. They came over in two's last night. Every time two would leave two more would come."

On Saturday morning, Dec. 20, Tonie Vernola, an 18-year-old home health aide was at the Vigil site. Vernola said he planned to be working the information table for Hanna and Keller during daylight hours

Asked why he was getting involved, Vernola responded, "it's necessary. If I don't do it, who will."

Hanna added, "There are others who will get involved. That's generally the feeling over here. People feel isolated, and that if they don't step out no one will."

Both Hanna and Keller said that they would pack up and go (Continued on next page)

The Dish of the Year in Review

A CHRISTMAS CORRAL (An ''Other than bulls, we all know what's in a corral'' Nose)

What has more drama than the outcome of ACIE's last four Emperor elections? More suspense than the announcement of monies raised at any Closet Ball function? More heart than an Oakland Parade Contingent meeting? The Christmas Newsletter's Annual Barf-Off!

In case you are not familiar with that type of communication, it's an entire year in the life of the sender, capsuled, containing every fact you didn't care to know or even wanted to remember about the sender. Here's my version.

Dear friends:

In January, the T&C Dollies made their first appearance. Billy & Eddy were "married" at the Paradise. The 1986 Float Committee was formed. Dan and Larry "took over" the Turf Club. Phil (Mrs. Bob St. John) won Revol's 6th Chilli Cook-Off. Tits Luy-Its won the 7th Bi-Annual Miss $1.98 at the Lake Lounge. My carbuncles were acting up again!

In February, the Mad Hatter Auction didn't quite make it at the T&C. Taco Toni became head bartender at Bench & Bar. Jim Sanchez left the Lake Lounge. Bitches In Black was a huge success. Cheree started at the Paradise. Kelly's closed. The second annual A Bit of Heart with a Touch of Class was extremely successful. The T&C reopened its lunches. I dropped my uvula and nobody noticed!

EBAF got its tax-free status in March. The Oakland Parade Contingent (its new name) had its first fundraiser at the Paradise. Lady Johnny's announced Suicide Party died before it got off the ground. Big Mama's celebrated its 8th Anniversary. TBSB tried to strike back but didn't.

Terry & Marge started the Saturday Soup Kitchen at the Lake Lounge for OPC. Zephyr Jim wore a tuxedo! Mr. Lumberjack George had a spaghetti feed at Revol, for OPC. Val postponed her function at Paradise. Easter Baskets were distributed to PWA/ARCs at Fairmont Hospital. There was still no marker on Fat Fairy's grave. Elaine Wallace was among the missing. I got a paper cut on my finger that took days to heal!

In April, Phil had his Mexican feast at Revol for OPC. The April Fools Extravaganza was canceled at T&C because Don didn't feel like doing it! Sam performed Cleo the Harlot. Tuesday night spaghetti feeds started at the Paradise, for the Fairmont Canteen fund. Cheree had a very successful Unity, the Heart of the Family at Paradise.

George was given a "train" birthday party by BJ. (P&D still wonder why they weren't invited!) Pee Wee was the only East Bay person to register for the '86 AIDS Bike-aThon. The Turf Club served Sunday brunches, briefly! Au Revoir, Pierre. The patio at Fairmont's AIDS Ward was decorated. I noticed three new laugh lines under my eyes!

WE ARE FAMILY

Tootsi & Manuel opened May by hosting We Are Family at Paradise. Who can ever forget being a part of The Rocky Horror Picture Show? Little Mother had an auction for Pierre at T&C. Good bye, Starr. Carlos and Empress Billy ran in the Bay-to-Breakers.

The tickets for the first Bar-ina-Barrel go on sale for OPC. The bus trip to Reno's coronation was canceled, as was a flea market at Bill's Eagle. There were rumors of a bar in San Leandro called Palomino going gay. My lumbago started acting up, curtailing my duties!

In June, Little Mother had an auction in Starr's memory, and she stated that she "has had lots of edjumakashun." Revol had its biennial luau. Little Mother and John celebrated their 20th anniversary at T&C. Terry and Marge hosted a huge B-B-Q at the Paradise for OPC. The Oakland Pompons were introduced at this party. It was also my birthday! Cheree's flea market was bleak, at best.

OPC's float won Best Out of Town in the S.F. Freedom Day Parade. The Palomino became Fickle Fox, and hosted A Night of Stars. Miss Kitty roasted my comments about the bar and its management. A total of $4,500 was raised to embellish the day room and patio at Fairmont's AIDS Ward. Tootsi had an emergency appendectomy. LaRouche exposed his ugliness. My back pains became worse; to my spouse, I was a pain a little lower!

The gals won the July softball game between the guys and the gals. The T&C celebrated its 3rd Anniversary. The Miss $1.98 Beauty Pageant was postponed until August. The Closet Ball was held at the Fickle Fox; Debbie was King, Justin was Queen.

A "letter" from ACIE created some furor among the community. David Reighn had a one-nighter at Big Mama's. Lancers changed its name to 5th Amendment, and the 5th Amendment went straight. Chuck and Carlos celebrated their 7th anniversary of togetherness. An ingrown toenail put an end to my break dancing career.

In August, East Bay CALM (No On 64) organized. The Turf Club had a bathing suit/muumuu/sunglasses function. The Barbecue: of the people, by the people, for the people was an event long to be remembered. Revol celebrated its 12th Anniversary. The 8th semi-annual Miss $1.98, hosted by Joanna Caron, produced two Miss 99 cents! The winners were: Tammy WhyNot and Jackie O'NiceAss.

The Lake Lounge moved its 8th Anniversary to September, "Unless he changed his mind — again!" Emperor Paul canceled the candidate night at Fickle Fox. OPC closed its books with a balance of $1,331.08. Suzie's birthday party at T&C was honored with a "singing Buddha!" I burned my hand on an old iron frypan, and my spouse had to eat cold leftovers.

VICTORY

In September, East Bay CALM organizes fundraisers with Oakland bars. South County organizes, too. Revol concluded its inhouse pool tournament. ACIE's coronation held no surprises. Empress VIII was Mama Chuckles; Emperor VIII, David Montoya. The Victory Brunch was held at Revol. My halitosis flared up — again!

Dean Snow hosted his annual October Columbus Day Party at Big Mama's. The Liar's Dice tournament with Revol and Town & Country was finally played. A Bridge-the-Gap event in San Francisco wasn't as advertised. Chuck and Carlos' car was damaged in a supermarket lot on Market. There was tremendous apathy with the No on 64 events at various bars. Mama Chuckles almost cut off his thumb by going through a closed glass door!

There were still no "fans" at Ward B of S.F. General Hospital, as promised by Big C. Sunday stuffed animals raffles continued at Paradise, and sprouted in other bars. The Paradise proudly presented its "new" round bar. The In-Memory Fund announced a balance of $2,790.30. My water on the knee turned into tennis elbow of the ankle!

In November, Prop. 64 was soundly defeated! Little Mother had another auction for EBAF at Revol. ACIE had its Investiture for the Galaxy Court of Stars court, in the form of a Military Wedding. A Casino Royale was held at Paradise to raise funds for In-Memory Fund and Adopt-A-House. The Paradise hosted a reverse Bridge-the-Gap. Revol closed its dining room. Halloween came and went. My head-aches continued, along with the buzzing in my ears. (Were my shirts too small?)

shirts too small?)
And in December, Bartenders' Bash was held. Ed Paulson hosted an auction for PWAs/ARCs and the Needy, at Big Mama's. Christmas parties were the order of the day. Bob Ross hosted the annual B.A.R., dinner/Christmas party at his home. I behaved myself, for a change!

Now, it's time for the BIG day. My abdominal muscles have sagged in all the wrong places. People who tell me to hold my stomach in don't realize that I am holding it in!

But, don't worry about me. Feel sorry for poor Santa Claus. He only comes once a year, and then it's down a chimney! I smile, Love.

The decorations on Haight Street this year may be the most creative in the city. At the Haight Street Barber Shop, Santa Claus sleeps in a barber chair while candy canes and teddy bears fill one of the windows. A Christmas tree shines from the rear of the shop as a wooden soldier stands ready to beat yuletide drums.

Victoria Corner is bedecked with holiday wreaths. The DeLuxe bar sports a beautifully decorated tree surrounded by twinkling lights. Down the street at Trax, the unique bar lamps are highlighted with holiday lights and wreaths.

Haight Street's charm at the Christmas season is the creativity of the many merchants who turn their stores into little wonderlands. Teddy bears, polar bears, and snowflakes abound.

At the Forma store there are elves. An electric train captures the eye of the crowd at the For Something Different toy store.

At night the hustle of the crowd is replaced by beauty as the lights begin to appear in the many stores. It is a kind of holiday feeling possibly expected in the post-Haight Ashbury era — only home if the county reverses itself and votes for the AIDS suppleentary funding in January.

Haight Street and Castro

Street are both boulevards filled with the spirit of Christmas, 1986. It would seem that each area reflects a desire by the people to celebrate and put a special kind of joy into their lives.

On Monday, Dec. 22, the East Bay AIDS Resource Organization and Local 616 of the United Service Employees Union sponsored a gathering of supporters at the Vigil site. A Christmas tree was donated to the vigilers and was decorated with checks and donations for the East Bay AIDS Project, the group that stands in most need of the additional AIDS funding the county has so far refused to allocate.

Hanna and Keller requested the B.A.R. to publish the names and phone numbers of the five men on the Alameda County Board of Supervisors. They are: John George, 272-6695; Robert Know, 272-6693; Charles Santana (chairman), 272-6692; Ed Campbell, 272-6691.

The Poppy Project

The Poppy Project was created by San Franciscans who have lost friends or lovers to AIDS. It is meant as a healing ritual and a spiritual statement. We have collected money to buy California poppy seeds to be planted on hillsides throughout the city. As the hillsides burst into color next spring, we want it to be a reminder to all that there is hope, there is life and there is love and spirit in San Francisco's gay community.

These seeds have been planted as a tribute to the courage of those who face the crisis within our community. The flowers will represent the beauty and the spirit that we have acquired with our own growth. We have a lot to be proud of and we have a lot to share. Our statement of how we feel needs to be big.

Let's cover the city in a sea of gold. Instead of filling every vacant lot with buildings, let's cover them with poppies. Let's show the world that although the crisis we face is big, our love for our selves is bigger, and therefore we shall overcome it.

Betty's Blues

Poor AIDS Joke Incites Filmmaker to Raise Consciousness

our writing shows all the signs of AIDS."
That bad joke in Betty Blue has led to consciousness-raising which may in turn lead Jean-Jacques Beineix to make a film about the AIDS

"Passionate Frenchman" is a cliche, a stereotype, and perhaps a redundancy, but there's no more apt description for this sensitive, outspoken filmmaker who dropped out of medical school to start working his way up in the picture business.

He assisted such directors as Rene Clément, Claude Berri, Claude Zidi, and Jerry Lewis, then Beineix did his first film, a short, at the age of 30. "They told me it was well-made," he says. "I told them, 'If I can't make a film after ten years of assistantificating. I ought to assistant-directing, I ought to give up!"

His first feature, Diva, scored His first feature, Diva, scored with audiences and critics, including those who never thought they'd like anything "new wave." It featured Philadelphia-born Wilhelmenia Wiggins Fernandez in the title role. Beineix says he found her playing Musetta in La Boheme at the Paris Opera after searching all over the world, trying the more obvious names such as Leontyne Price and Shirley. as Leontyne Price and Shirley Verrett, but learning they were Verrett, but learning they we booked up years in advance.

Anyone else might have hired an actress and dubbed her sing-ing voice, but not Beineix. "I wanted to have the difficult way,"

The film's young star, Frederic Andrei, also did things the hard way. He turned down all the acting offers Diva brought his way because he wanted to direct a film of his own. He worked on it for five years, Beineix reports, and this year it opened and closed in rapid succession. What next?

"If he has guts he will survive."

The man knows whereof he speaks, because after soaring with Diva he crashed and burned with his next picture, The Moon in the Gutter. Despite the fact that his latest, Betty Blue, is in the "win" column, that one failure left deep scars on Beineix's psyche. As he talks about it he seems on the verge of tears.

"Somebody has been destroyed in me with The Moon in the Gutter. I had a car crash and I will remember it every time I get behind the wheel?' His English is just irregular enough to make me wonder for a moment wheth-er he's speaking figuratively. He

"I did it genuinely ... put everything in it," he continues with a tortured expression he might have picked up from Mont-gomery Clift, "and they treated me like a piece of trash ... They condemn you in the name of condemn you in the name of

Jean-Jacques Beineix

HE'D RATHER BE SAILING

Since that experience, Beineix reveals, "I can't stay with an au-dience watching my own picture. I could in the past but not now." It doesn't matter that people are reacting favorably to Betty Blue. "I may look strong, but not in the deeps." He looks wistfully out the window at the sailboats in San Francisco Bay. (He had a room on the Sausalito side while attend-ing the Mill Valley Film Festival.)

In Betty Blue Jean-Hugues Anglade, who starred in Patrice Chereau's gay classic L'Homme Blesse, has a passionate affair with newcomer Béatrice Dalle. They spend much of the film making love, and may rack up more nude scenes than the stars of any previous non-pornographic movie.

"They were ready for it," Beineix says of the nudity and other physical and emotional demands of their roles. "Jean-Hugues is a dream for a director ... a great technician, a great professional. Béatrice is just spontaneous. She gets into it. But sometimes she has to be guided. Because she is new she doesn't always know

"The nudity is very impor The nuclity is very impor-tant," the director says, calling the fact that the man is naked as much s the woman a "small po-litical statement, to treat men as women." Speaking of the usual screen approach he sneers, "Do we undress women because they are unimportant?

"I don't know what is sexism," homophobia triggered by his line about AIDS. It appears in a rejection letter about a novel by Zorg (Anglade) which Betty (Dalle) has mailed out. To make matters worse, in the next scene volatile Betty attacks the offending pub-lisher. In context one could eas-ily think the man, in his tasteful apartment, is gay.

"Two or three people in France told me about this," Bei-neix responds. "He's supposed to be an African (hunter)... It never occurred to me he could have been taken as gay."

Regarding the offending line he explains, "I just took what is the ultimate fear in the world at this time . . . If I'd done it after Chernobyl I would have used ***

The heterosexual filmmaker The heterosexual filmmaker says he's seen the effect of the disease on his many gay friends, who have "come from a horrible state of guilt to having more freedom... We have been raised by people who are ashamed of sexuality, and suddenly the plague is there.

there...

"People make their lives the way they must. I'm not a moralist." Having lived among people of many races and sexual preferences he can't understand intolerance. "It's so far from me... I don't imagine I could harm any group of people."

But everyone hates someone. In Beineix's case it's ''idiots,' of which, he points out rightly, the gay population has as great a per-centage as straights.

Some of Beineix's best friends, dating back to his med school days, are now AIDS researchers. Some of their insights have Some of their insights have helped give him the germ of an idea for a film about the fight against AIDS. He cites "greediness and prejudice" as two elements it would deal with. "They've discovered it's not a homosexual disease," he points out. "It's the number of partners ... My sexual habits are the bachelor's habits, which are also dangerous." dangerous.'

RAGE HARD!

The way the religious right is using AIDS as an excuse for discriminating against gays is, Beineix feels, "just the beginning of a movement, a regression in society which we have to fight immediately . . . I have said to straights who want to live the way they want to live, not to be stupid and naive enough to use (AIDS) and naive enough to use (AIDS) against the others because it will come back against you.

"I have the feeling there is a movie to be made about that."

Returning to the movie he's already made, Beineix calls Betty

Blue "in a way... the anti-Blue Velvet. That's not a moral judgment — don't say, 'Hey, frog, don't compare yourself to David Lynch!"... I choose beauty over

"I'm trying to get people to feel. First they feel, then they think."

Beineix says the film business is no place for pessimists—
"You have to think you're going to win"— so he has become an optimist. As such he even sees a bright side to the AIDS crisis: "When they find a cure for AIDS it could also be the cure for cancer. Maybe a lot of people will die from it, but also a lot of people will be saved. .."

There are connections be-Beineix — who, remember, is not a moralist — views things. Terrorism and drugs keep linking up in his conversation with intolerance, censorship, closed-mindedness, and hypocrisy.

"That's why our kids are taking drugs and trying to escape
this world," he says in the midst of discussing the censorship of lovemaking from films that show heads being blown off at close

Betty Blue will never be re-

that country has a rule forbidding the display of pubic hair in foreign films. Beineix blames it on a national inferiority complex: on a national interiority complex:
"The Japanese have less (pubic)
hair . . . It's a racist rule . . . You can be naked as a Japanese but not as a foreigner."

International markets being as they are, such factors have to be taken into account. Acting as pro-ducer on his own films, however, gives Beineix the option of ignor-ing them. He likes this arrange-ment. "You can have your head in the clouds and your feet on the ground," he says. "I didn't invent this. Mr. Chaplin did."

While visiting the U.S. to show Betty Blue at the Mill Valley Film Festival, Beineix had meetings with people who want him to make a film in America. "It's a big move," he says, still undecided at the time of our interview.
"It stops me from sleeping."

Despite the pressures that go with filmmaking and the depres-sion that's afflicted him since The Moon went in the gutter, Beineix isn't contemplating an-other line of work. "It doesn't (mean) that you don't have fun and great pleasure.

"I do movies for survival," he says, referring to emotional rather than financial survival.

ociety expresses attitudes toward fellow humans through a variety of sources. One of those is art.

In ancient Greece the attitudes towards males loving each other were relaxed and liberal. This social posture was reflected in the paintings and sculpture ex-

By the 19th century Victorian philosophy had altered the scene severely. Pictorial representation was stilled by coldness and aloofness. Sentimentality substituted for passion. Even the discoveries of archeologists were corrupted to shield the invocent. to shield the innocent.

But in the 1890s the scene began to shift. The Oscar Wilde circle produced Aubrey Beardsley and his groundbreaking intersex-ual musings for Salome.

In the early part of our own century Gertrude Stein, Romaine Brooks, Jean Cocteau, and others attempted to push the artistic boundaries even further.

Stein held definite views on gay males. "The act male homosexuals commit is ugly and repugnant and afterwards they are disgusted with themselves. They drink and take drugs to palliate this but they are disputed with this, but they are disgusted with the act and they are always changing partners and cannot be really happy?' But Stein was all heart with fellow lesbians, "Wo-men do nothing that they are disgusted by and nothing that is repulsive and afterwards they are happy and can lead happy lives

Emmanuel Cooper, an art critic for Gay Times and the Tribune, has traced the chronology of gays in art for the past 100 years. He begins with a brief years. He begins with a brief sketch of erotic expression in an-cient times and then comes for-ward. He covers the scene in lov-ing detail and lavishes a plentiful display of black and white illustrations upon us.

Naturally, a good deal of sex-ual coding took place. For an ob-ject lesson we need look no fur-ther than Charles Semuth's Nude Descending A Staircase (1912). But trends loosened up in the Roaring '20s with images of men exercising and bathing in YMCA settings. Male wrestling was a choice way of expressing was a choice way of expressing homoerotic urges in a safe, mas-culine way that was non-threatening to an uptight public. A classic pick of the new genre was Duncan Grant's Two Wrestlers.

No Laughing Matter

by Steve Warren

f you've wondered what happened to the laughing woman from Playland at the Beach, she's gone gay, learned to speak, and become the star of the first of a series of monthly specials produced under the Electric City umbrella for cable channel 6.

Serious topics such as male rape are planned for future shows, but they decided to have fun with the first one, "A Politically Correct Xmas—A Farkle Fable;" which aired last week and will be repeated Dec. 30 at 8 p.m. I hope they did have fun, because viewers won't—unless they have friends in the cast and don't have sense enough to be embarrassed for them.

It's hard to describe this hodgepodge, but co-writer Carol Fyfe is in the middle of most of it as Dr. Farkle, a presumed lesbian cult figure. She rides around the city in a white limo, dancing in her seat and waving to crowds which, when glimpsed, prove to be small but enthusiastic. She delivers a monologue on how to get rid of holiday blues and leftover turkey carcasses and, with Richard Locke and Rita Rockett, brings Christmas presents to AIDS patients at San Francisco General — at least we see them going in with gifts and coming out without them.

Men and women in the street, some of them well-known, wish the community happy holidays when they can be heard over the traffic noise.

You get the impression that no scene was re-shot or discarded. There's no cutting and little camera movement within any scene, no matter how long. A quartet singing "Deck the Halls" is shot from an odd, off-center angle that never reveals the face of the man on the right.

The most interesting segment lasts less than a minute, with two luscious contestants in the Ms. Leather competition going on about their pleasure and ignoring Farkle, as you are advised to do.

I wish Electric City well in future endeavors, but "A Politically Correct Xmas" is a mistake that should never have been put on public view.

Blazing Redheads Sizzle at Birthday Bash

by David-Alex Nahmod

he Blazing Redheads, perhaps San Francisco's best salsa/rock band, celebrated its first birthday Dec. 14 at the Baybrick.

When a band is really good you can lose track of time, thinking they've been together a lot longer than they actually have. And so it is with the Redheads. They perform so well together, and appear to be so at ease on stage, you could easily take it for granted that they have been together for many years. But no, it's just been one year, and happy birthday.

One obvious question is, why do they call themselves the Blazing Redheads? There isn't a redhead among the group. Band spokesperson Donna Viscuso addressed this question.

"Many of you have been asking us where we got our name?" she good-naturedly told the crowd. "Well, that's going to have to remain our little secret!" Everyone laughed, and Donna invited the audience to dance to a hot salsa number called "Get Down and Stay Down." The crowd jumped to its feet.

The band was joined on a few numbers by their guests, violinist India Cooke and vocalist/trombone player Angie Wellman. Angie sang "Happy Birthday" to the Redheads in a sentimental moment that moved the audience to applause.

As the dancing of the audience became more joyful and frenzied, the Redheads joined them while continuing to play their instruments. Everyone was having a marvelous time.

Many people purchased raffle tickets during the concert, with such prizes given out as free tapes from Captain Video, free 30-minute massages, discounts at leading shops and restaurants, etc. The proceeds from the raffle sales will go to production of the band's first album.

Happy birthday to the Blazing Redheads, and good luck!

Lights and Shadows

A History of Shadows by Robert C. Reinhart Alyson, $6.95

by Marv. Shaw

he word "shadows" carries some closely related ambiguities as Reinhart uses it. The combined histories of the four main characters are in required shadows, in great part, because that's where their gayness has to be kept. They themselves are shadowed because that vital part of themselves was closed off from most others in their lives, sometimes even from themselves. And as each tells his history to Reinhart's effaced narrator, they cast their own shadows on each other and the times they shared.

The narrator seems to be a gay academic intent on gathering an oral history of gay male life in America from the '20s to the present. His method is to encourage four men to tell their separate but intertwined stories. Billy Hicks, interior designer; Carl Mason, musician; Robert Regal, financial consultant; and Wesley Ober, actor, bring the lights of their recollections to a dark era.

their recollections to a dark era.

Their formative childhood was in the '20s. Their adulthood begins when the country has sunk into the Depression. World War II churns up their lives. The most blighting shadow falls on them in the McCarthy period, when two are endangered for both their gayness and their peripheral association with leftists. The closing section finds each coping with aging.

On the way through this saga, other people play important parts. Lily Gusman, a shrewd and sympathetic confidante; Teddy, a terribly good looking, flamboyant drifter; and the slimy Seymour, a distinctly Roy Cohn type, are three who stand out.

As the actual story-telling shifts about among the four, we get the feel of how it was to live through the decades of the closet. Also, we see how each must cope with his own gayness — and what that coping does to the other three. It is to Reinhart's great credit that both the social picture and the psychological identity of each become real and compelling.

But this achievement has not been made without sacrifice, an absence which is sometimes a disappointment. Because the sweep of time is so vast and therefore so demanding of space, events which might have been better developed as dramatic scenes are often compressed to anecdotes.

Finally, however, there is a fine summary value here. Though they differ from each other markedly, their friendship, based on their common gayness, has held them together. They value and depend on each other. As the novel's gathering light pushes back the shadows, a self-chosen family is revealed.

finally Physique Pictorial.

Lesbian art shows were also frequent through the years and caused no end of speculation as to the private lives of the creators.

In recent years homoerotic art has been pushed to the ultimate. A young artist, Denis O'Sullivan, has fashioned a sculpture Toilet Piece (1978), which depicts tearoom sex among gays. Or, we can observe Upper Balcony (1980) by Martin Jones, which is based on Andy Warhol's film Lonesome Cowboys. And at the opposite end of the scale Denis O'Sullivan, again, has given us Transvestite With Torn Stocking (1982).

Within the first several moments of The Berkeley Rep's
Servant of Two Masters there are Servain of two Masters there are five musicians fiddling, four lovers wooing, three jugglers jug-gling, two fathers fighting, one deceased arising, and an imper-sonator of the opp'site sex.

And that's only leading to the arrival of the show's master rapscallion, the servant Trufaldino, who commits himself simultaneously to two employers in a vain attempt to placate his growling stomach. How could he know, struggling to keep his two masters apart so they won't discover his double-timing, that they are actually tragically parted lovers in ardent search of one another? Or that their separation is hindering the marriage of a se-cond pair, Silvio and Clarice, whose own servant yearns throughout this circuitous line-of-love for Truffaldino himself? Sorting out the entanglements and filling his evermore vocal stomach have filled the tale of Truffaldino with enough humor and action to keep Carlo Goldoni's comedy on the boards for more than 200 years

Considered the culmination of the commedia dell'Arte form, Servant of Two Masters was writ-ten in 1749, after Goldoni had paid a lengthy and successful ap-prenticeship to commedia, writing numerous scenarios (plot outlines) on which the players im-provised the show. But the form was in decline, its earlier creative energy being replaced with mean-spirited coarseness and ag-gression. Goldoni, demanding more control, began writing out his scripts in greater detail, pro-viding dialogue which streng-thened both the humor and the thened both the humor and the psychological subtext of the situations. In Servant of Two Masters Goldoni provided a script perfectly balanced between the old and new styles, its written complexities leaving ample room for improvisational creativity.

That's the mix Berkeley Rep director Sharon Ott has wisely maintained in her exuberant production, showing admirable restraint where lack of restraint is ostensibly the key; neither the story nor the audience are overstory nor the audience are over-whelmed or benumbed with hokum for its own sake. The zaniness of this Servant grows organically from the story. And that's saying something for Ott and the skills of her cast, for the action, beside the aforementionaction, besite the abremention-ed juggling, includes actors swinging on ropes over the audi-ence's heads, walls and stairways reeling about the stage, a trans-vestite strip-tease, and a false mustache that sticks to everything but the face it belongs to.

This general pandemonium This general pandemonium so deftly orchestrated by Ott reveals the play when it could obscure it. So it's a toss-up which is the more delightful element of this production—dusting off an antique and finding it dashingly alive, or enjoying the flotilla of actors set loose to work their wiles upon it. For the cast is a celebration of talent. Mime Troupe veteran Sharon Lockwood is not veteran Sharon Lockwood is not merely a broad and lovable comic. Watch as she and master clown Geoff Hoyle find low humor, high wit, and the touching discovery of their mutual attraction while il-literately trying to decipher a letter. The scene is an endearing masterpiece, and not alone among the play's highlights.

Jeffrey Birh's Cocker Spaniel insouciance can't be disguised by his errant mustache and student's glasses, and Sabrina LaRocca is a spitfire as his betrothed, Clarice, and is much more beautiful in her Italian brunette hair than the platinum get-up she's worn before. Ken Grantham as the conniving Pan-talone, and Charles Dean as his confidante, play with gusto. And the lovesick hero, James Carpenter, at 6 foot-many inches tall and darkly mustachioed, hasn't been handsomer since the Rep's Misalliance; his Dudly DoRight pastiche and suave heart-sickness are right-on. Starring as The Servant is Geoff Hoyle. What an inspired clown he is, and he's seen here in his most impressive role. He can be touchingly sensitive, hysterically founny (as in a duel he wages with funny (as in a duel he wages with a plate of spaghetti), or, best of a plate or spagnetti, or, uses or all, simply joyful; when he can't contain his glee he dances a scrambled sort of Charlotte Greenwood jig that is sheer happiness. Backing up the entire cast as waiters, porters, and roustabout buffoons are a trio known as Vaudeville Nouveau—Daniel Mankin, Jeffrey Raz, and Mark Sackett—who juggle, play instruments and characters, and fulfill trio-handedly the concep-tion of the show.

For Director Ott proves everything new is actually old by employing the current rage, New Vaudeville, in an earlier incarna-tion: Vaudeville. She's updated the play's action to the turn of the the play saction to the turn of the century, making the dialect humor, outrageous puns, prat-falls and juggling right at home. Sort of New Old Vaudeville. The zany plots, puns ('How's your wife, Della?'' 'Dead.'' "Morte, Della?''), and absurd situations (Truffaldino really does carry on conversations with his amazing-ly eloquent stomach; and drolly comments on finding women's ly eloquent stomach; and drolly comments, on finding women's clothing in his boss' trunk, "Master's have their own tastes!"), make Servant of Two Masters an oingo boingo big bam wickie-wackey plum of holiday merriment. The Berkeley Rep's bamboozler Servant will be lighting up the Bay Area through Jan. 31; call 845-4700.

THESE TOO

A chapter of a forthcoming novel by Kevin Killian has just been published in Five Fingers Review #4. His "T. Rex" recounts the visit of little Paula Theale to the neighborhood crazy lady. It's a cool gothic, a tragi-comedy of adolescent hipness and the fate of a mother's love.

And Michael Bennett's Dreamgirls is coming back, for probably its last visit—at least until it's embalmed as a movie. So this is your last chance to see it "live"—if this incredible mechanized marvel could ever be described that way

Of Ghost Stories and Things That Go Bump in the Night

The House at Pelham Falls by Brenda Weathers Naiad Press, $7.95

by Dianne Gregory

host stories are as much a part of culture as religion, music, or any other form of human expression. They are part of our attempt to come to grips with death and what comes after. For every religion that promises life everlasting in a state of nirvana there are a hundred stories of wandering souls, usually tormenting those still among the living.

So it should not be surprising So it should not be surprising that a lesbian ghost story should pop up among the 1986 Naiad releases. That The House at Pelham Falls by Brenda Weathers is a superbly told tale comes as a most pleasant surprise, however, for it is written with a cinematic sweep that makes me want to call Steven Spielberg or Donna Dietch, or both. Dietch, or both.

The book is set on the coast of Maine in the dead of winter, where Dr. Karen Latham retreats where Dr. Karen Latham retreats to ruminate on her first lesbian love affair and write a book on Anthropology. It is a story of possession of the most gentle and violent sort; of dreams turned nightmare; of a house haunted by what could have been. That it is also a coming out story gives it a also a coming out story gives it a special twist. That it is a love story is a given.

And the characters — from the ethereal Blessing McCartland now made of mist, who lost her precious Aimee on the night she discovered their love, to the Miss Marple-like Etta Cavendish who ultimately drives the ghost away

— are drawn with a deft stroke
that reveals enough but doesn't dwell on motivation.

The supernatural is a theme that comes naturally to women's literature. We are, after all, assigned with the intuitive role in our culture, and are usually the first to be called "witch." Even present right-wing literature present right-wing literature which goes to town on male homosexuality and its supposed ills calls up the old bugaboo "witch" when referring to the female version. And so Brenda Weathers' imagination had fertile fields on which to sow her story. She did so with a fine touch.

The Russians Are Coming

t the height of the holiday season there can be little doubt that Russian music weighs heavily on our minds. As usual. The Nutcracker seems to usual, The Nutcracker seems to be everywhere. American Ballet Theatre's production (choreo-graphed by and starring Mikhail Baryshnikov) is on PBS:TV, while a controversial new film of Pacific Northwest Ballet's Nutcracker (with sets and costumes by Mau-rice Sendak) is on display at the Northpoint Cinema. The San Francisco Ballet is currently en-Francisco Ballet is currently enjoying a huge success with its new production of Tchaikovsky's perennial treat at the Opera House and, from Folsom Street to Fisherman's Wharf, little toy soldiers are marching around this town with a vengeance!

The past few months have been particularly interesting in terms of Russian opera which, thanks to the recent usage of Supertitles, has become infinite-ly easier to digest and far more exciting to watch. Although I was unable to catch the Houston Grand Opera's opening production of Mussourgsky's Boris Godunov — my sources tell me that HGO enjoyed a major artistic triumph — I was able to attend a brilliantly staged Russian opera in San Francisco and another in the nation's capital which, although eagerly anticipated, left a great deal to be desired. Here's why.

By this point I'm convinced soprano Mirella Freni has made a pact with the devil. Now nearing 50, she seems to look half her age or, as one of my more jealous friends muttered, "Fuck that shit. She looks half my age!" No matter how young she looks, Freni continues to glow with a musical strength and artistic commitment that somehow manages to defy description. From her silken blonde tresses and doe-like eyes to her sensual lips and girlish figure, the woman is simply remarkable.

Freni's portrayal of the love-sick Tatiana in Tchaikovsky's Eugene Onegin was, far and away, one of the highlights of the away, one of the infilinging of the San Francisco Opera's fall sea-son; a magnificently sung char-acterization which, although it polarized the evening, never up-set the opera's dramatic balance. Much of the credit goes to director John Copley, whose sensitivity to the emotional surges in Pushkin's novel — as well as Tchaikovsky's score — allowed him to frame the dramatic action as tenderly as possible.

Although Freni dominated the evening — I often found it hard to take my eyes off her — I was particulaly impressed by Denes Gulyas' impassioned Lensky and Joseph Frank's immaculately etched cameo portrayal of Mon-sieur Triquet. Nicolai Ghiaurov's Prince Gremin and Thomas Allen's Eugene Onegin were sturdy and reliable contributions to this production.

Much of the evening's musical access was directly attributable to Richard Bradshaw's firm command of the San Francisco Opera orchestra. Bradshaw lovingly captured the full sweep of Tchaikov-sky's surging romanticism as well as the composer's classic mo-ments of Russian despair. There were so many delicately sculpted moments in this Eugene Onegin Mirella Freni's impassioned portrayal of Tatiana in Tchaikov sky's Eugene Onegin could have charmed Ebeneezer Scrooge.

— moments which are rarely found in other productions — I almost felt as if I were experiencing Tchaikovsky's opera for the very first time.

Part of that feeling, no doubt, was due to Robin Don's highly evocative sets and Thomas Munn's superb lighting. Having originated at Festival Ottawa in 1983, this production was seen in San Diego in 1985 before coming to the Bay Area. I hope it hits the road with a venue area for this road with a vengeance, for this staging of Eugene Onegin is that rarity of rarities: an understated jewel of operatic excellence.

NOW, THE BAD NEWS

There were lots of jewels on-Washington Opera's production of The Tsar's Bride but, alas, nothing to match the consummate artistry of San Francisco Opera's Eugene Onegin. Al-though Washington Opera's pro-duction of Rimsky-Korsakov's rarely performed work (a shared effort with the Monte Carlo Opera) had sumptuous sets and costumes by its resident designer, Zack Brown, much of the per-formance sat on the stage like a leaden piroshki. The fault, I fear, lies not so much with the Ameri-cans involved in the production as the Russian stage director and conductor who were supposed to bring a true measure of authenticity to the project.

While reading Galina Vishnev-skaya's autobiography, I was parskaya's autobiography, I was particularly impressed by the rage she felt at the Soviet Union's habit of treating its artists like civil servants. Although she was, for many years, a leading artist with the Bolshoi Opera, as the stage director for this production of The Tsar's Bride Vishnevskaya only seemed to be recreating that which she knew from her past. The most painful aspect of her work was that, like the bureaucrats she castigates in her book it reeks of a civil service mental-ity — an enigma which makes me wonder if, perhaps, you can take certain Russian artists out of the Soviet Union but you cannot take the Soviet government's years of soul-numbing oppression out of certain Russian artists.

Almost in spite of Vishnev-skaya's stage direction, two rather impressive performances came from Cleopatra Ciruca as the jealous Lyubasha, and recently defected Russian tenor, Vya-cheslav Polosov, as Ivan Sergeichesiav Polosov, as Ivan Sergei-vich Lykov. Elizabeth Knighton sang quite beautifully as the heroine, Marfa, while Jeryl Metz's brief appearance as Dom-na Ivanova Saburova offered a touch of comic relief.

Although Vishnevskaya's hus-band, Mstislav Rostropovich, did a solid job of conducting, the Washington Opera's production of The Tsar's Bride never really of the isar's Briae never really seemed to be able to get off the ground. Some of the problem may lie in the ingredients for, like many a Russian meal, it sat heavily on the stage with scant hope of being easily digested.

Relatively Glad Tidings

n the spirit of the season we were hoping to review only great movies this week, but there weren't enough to fill even the margins. Besides, what fun would that be? So here's the usual mixed bag, with much more of the same to follow next

FLOWERY PRAISE

Being a man-eater myself I naturally relate to Audrey II, the plant in Little Shop of Horrors—the film of the musical of the film. Producer David Geffen film. Producer David Geffen wisely mated Audrey with Muppetman Frank Oz, and Oz, having his hands full as director, left her vocal chores to Levi Stubbs of the Four Tops. Despite the feminine name, Audrey II is not the sort of plant you'd want Miss Piggy's voice coming out of.

Actually, just about everyone involved with Little Shop has done just about everything right. It's a black comic, Petit Guignol Grease with less beautiful leads. It doesn't have the enormous scope of Absolute Beginners and scope of Absolute Beginners and only really captures the authentic falseness of the early '60s in one song, "Somewhere That's Green." But it's got a Supremeslike group acting as Greek chorus and Steve Martin as a sadistic dentist with Bill Murray as his prescales in patient in a subalct. masochistic patient in a subplot that could give S/M a bad but funny name.

Did someone mention plot? The discovery of Audrey II by Rick Moranis saves Vincent Gar-denia's Skid Row flower shop from oblivion and wins Rick the golden heart of Audrey I (Ellen Greene). The only catch is, the plant lives on human blood and won't take no for an answer when it says, "Feed me."

Grainy photography preserves the shoestring quality of Roger Corman's original. The climax is Corman's original. The climax is horrifying enough to scare kids and the dental scenes set my teeth on edge. No human could ever replace Frank N. Furter on the midnight cult circuit, but maybe a plant... 2, 4, 6, 8 — WHO DO WE ANIMATE?

Animation Celebration, in effect the 19½th Tournee of Animation, is a winning collection of 22 briefer-than-usual films that make great holiday viewing for families and adults with short attention spans.

My favorites include the previously seen Happy Hour, about inter-species but intra-gender dating, and Broken Down Film; and Colossal Pictures' Cat and Mouse, which takes off from the premise, What if Tom and Jerry played The Sunshine Boys? Then there's a brilliant pair from Canada, Get a Job, featuring camp-eo appearances by Carmen Miranda and Every Dog's Complete Guide to Home Safety. A Comic Zoom brilliantly but too briefly explores the potential of computer animation.

Unlike most of these programs there's nothing heavy in Animation Celebration. It's just for fun.

BETTE'S OUT OF THE BAG

In last week's interview, Sond-heim & Co. author Craig Zadan mentioned he was preparing to produce a film which, he predict-ed, would win Bette Midler an Oscar. He couldn't reveal what it was because sensitive negotia-tions were in progress, but that never stopped Liz Smith. She blabbed that Bette is eager to star in the biography of Lotte star in the biography of Lotte Lenya for Zadan. It seems that marrying her "Kraut" was just the beginning of Frau Bette von Haselberg's German period.

THE HOT COUPLE

Although Richard Gere and Although Richard Gere and Kim Basinger have each sug-gested acting potential at some point, their pairing in No Mercy is obviously intended to evoke Eros rather than Oscar. They do make a hot couple, but it's a very sexist relationship and neither does their customary nude scene.

Basinger was sold at 13 to Jeroen Krabbe (The Fourth Man), who controls the New Orleans suburb of Algiers. On a field trip to Chicago, where Gere's a cop, Basinger catches his eye and Krabbe kills his partner. He follows them South, where the prevailing decadence is traffical. prevailing decadence is typified by the widow who says, "I knew by the widow who says, "I knew very little about my husband's personal life."

Gere slaps Basinger around, handcuffs himself to her, and plays cat and mouse with Krabbe for an hour and a half of routine but suspenseful action.

Like Star Trek IV in San Francisco, No Mercy captures too lit-tle of the local Louisiana flavor. The French Quarter looks un-usually subdued at night and Basinger, supposedly born on the bayou, has no accent.

It's got a few good moments of steamy passion, but only fans of the stars should go out of their way to see it. (Alexandria)

ALLIE FOX IN FREE

As Warner Brothers movies set As warner protners movies set in Latin American jungles go, The Mosquito Coast is better than The Mission, which isn't bad. Coast would be better if Harrison Ford's character were pleasanter in the beginning. It's more dramatic to see someone go from good to bad than bad to

Allie Fox (Ford) is an eccentric inventor who doesn't like the trends— "How did America get this way?... This country's going to the dogs." Being a man of what he calls "not ordinary gumption, but four o'clock-in-the-morning courage," he leaves it all behind, dragging wife Helen Mirren and courage, he leaves it all behind, dragging wife Helen Mirren and four children along to a Central American jungle where he tries to start over, doing it right this

Unfortunately, Allie brings with him the seeds of what went wrong up North. In no time he's wrong up North. In no time he s fighting for territory, polluting the water, and restricting reli-gious freedom, while the little Foxes secretly play capitalistic games.

Ford continues to be the only actor who gets choice dramatic roles between episodes of a blockbuster series. He follows the dictates of director Peter Weir and screenwriter Paul Schrader to the letter and gives an excel-lent performance, better than originally cast Jack Nicholson would probably have done.

River Phoenix, as his oldest son, proves Stand by Me was no fluke and he's the young teenager to watch. Butterfly McQueen appears briefly, but you won't recognize her until she you won trecognize her until she opens her mouth; then you can't miss her. Martha Plimpton, as the daughter of TV missionary Andre Gregory, has the film's funniest line. Flirting with Phoenix she tells him, "I think about you when I go to the bathroom."

But The Mosquito Coast is no comedy, nor the tragedy it perhaps should have been. It's simply a study of the consequences of one manifestation of modern paranoia. (Galaxy)

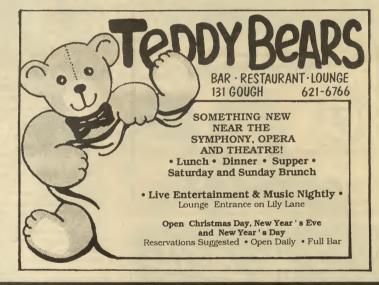

WHAT'S GINGER FULL OF?

Onetime dancer and some times actress Ginger Rogers has a new career: litigation. Having struck out in the suit charging struck out in the suit charging Fellini's Ginger and Fred with defaming her (it was actually a lovely tribute), she's turned her legal guns on the makers and distributors of a "Ginger Rogers as Dinah Barkley" (in The Barkleys of Broadway) doll, and may have a better case for a piece of the $8 million she's asking for.

Recently I dreamed Rogers and Lucille Ball replaced Mary Martin and Carol Channing in Legends. I wonder if she can sue me for that?

End-of-The-Year Blues

t's only a matter of days before the big year-end cele-brations begin. By now you should have reached the midpoint of saturation with parties, point of saturation with parties, booze, food, and maybe even some safe sex such as it manifests itself these days. Whoever said gay men and women are free spirits didn't realize our fantasies have a major part in realizing goals related to fulfillment in all

Be that as it may, you're all to be commended for your tremendous support of all the charities that came your way this year. Thousands and thousands of dollars were raised through your support and generosity. AIDS pa-tients are the largest beneficiaries of your largesse. And we can't afford to let up, no, not once in the year ahead. We always take care of our own and there is no reason to let that diminish.

We gay men and women have The LaRouche initiative took a lot of effort and financial support, finances that could have and should have been directed toward caring for our brothers with AIDS. Nevertheless, you all rallied and we were victorious in our fight, again, to defeat bigotry.

Last week, KQED (Channel 9) aired a 90-minute documentary about gay life before the Stonewall rebellion. Many of the people who appeared in it are still in our midst. I am convinced the pioneering nature of those earlier activists still exists in this earlier activists still exists in this community. You all owe yourselves a big pat on the back for continuing the traditions of those who paved the way so that all of us, all of you, can live in a fairly safe and happy environment which, after all, is guaranteed by the Constitution of the U.S. In their wisdom, earlier activists were wise in making coalitions were wise in making coalitions with other minority groups. These coalitions must continue if we are ever to become more than second-class citizens. Your input and support can make it happen. As we head into the final days of 1986, keep it in mind.

Next year has got to be the year that a cure for AIDS is found. It just gets too mind-boggling to see so many talented loved ones passing over. I know you're all doing your best—no one could ask for anything more. So, enjoy the holiday season. You all deserve it. And don't ever give up hope. ell boys and girls, not much dish this week. Everyone's so busy at parties and shopping; working on committees, etc., they've not been able to do much stirring around town. My deadline for this column was Saturday, so you'll have to wait for the dirt on what happened last weekend. Herb Hebron's party out in the Mission is sure to be a cause celebre and Mistress Kathy and Carol's shinding last Saturday night will generate some comment.

Until next week then, join all your loved ones and friends in a joyous Christmas celebration. Party 'til you drop and get up for more next weekend as we slide into 1987 more determined than ever to succeed in all our endeavors.

The Invisible Holocaust

The Pink Triangle: The Nazi War Against Homosexuals by Richard Plant Henry Holt & Co., $19.95

by Ray O'Loughlin

eading The Pink Triangle in the midst of the campaign against Prop. 64, I felt as though I were seeing the future as much as the past. It was the future that might have been had Lyndon LaRouche's PANIC people inflicted their mania on California.

The Nazis began the same way by going after homosexuals for health reasons, then exploiting common bigotry to further political aims, and ending up creating a system of unbelievable cruelty and massive death

Plant's book is the first comprehensive history of the gay experience in Nazi Germany. He traces the development of the early "gay liberation" movement in the pre-World War I and Weimar eras. Alongside that he shows the parallel development of Naziism with its attack on ho. Naziism with its attacks on ho-mosexuals in the same language used by American fanatics today to heap contempt upon gays as immoral, degenerate, and a threat to family and country.

A native of Frankfurt, Plant lived through the period he de-scribes until he fled Germany in 1938.

Plant shows the development of a system of police repression from social prejudice to legally codified crackdown. Before Hitler rose to formal power, gay bars and cafes were raided by Nazi thugs, but many remained open even after Hitler's takeover in January 1933. Not until 1935 did things change. Writes Plant, "That was the year when the campaign against homosexuals shifted into high gear and the new Nazi laws banning such gathering places and outlawing homosexuals as 'sex vagrants' went into effect.''

After that point, things moved quickly. One year after the Night of the Long Knives, the massacre of Ernst Roehm and his support-ers in the black-shirt SA (June, 1934), stringent new laws were enacted condemning homosexu-al conduct among men.

Roehm's open homosexuality as just an excuse, says Plant, for Hitler to eliminate him in order to achieve political purposes. "But Roehm's sexual habits were a sideshow," writes Plant. "They were never the real cause of his downfall."

Starting in 1935, a series of laws and decrees were issued to make Germany "homorein" (free of homosexuals). The Law for the Protection of Hereditary Health, for example, sanctioned the elimination of "deviant psychopaths, the criminally insane, and unneeded consumers." A Federal Security Department for Combatting Abortion and Homosexuality was established in the Gestapo. Even the contemplation of same-sex acts was made

Curiously, because women were of such low status in Ger-man society, lesbian acts were never mentioned in the Nazi laws.

Plant states that it is impossible to accurately estimate the number of gays arrested and sent to concentration camps. Records were kept poorly or destroyed. In-mates were transferred from camp to camp with only vague records.

Life in the camps, however, is well known from accounts by other surviving inmates. Few sur-viving gays have come forward to relate the horrors of their experi-ence. "The small minority of homosexuals, utterly disunited, usually apolitical, and thought to be abnormally passive, were par-ticularly vulnerable to abuse," writes Plant. A pink triangle on the uniform placed a prisoner on the lowest rung of the ladder.

Frequently, families would abandon brothers and sons ar-rested on charges of homosexu-ality under the infamous Para-graph 175. Due to social prejudice, neither were gays accepted by inmate resistance groups.

Gay prisoners had the lowest survival rate of any group. Tot-ture, executions, brutal work bri-gades, medical experiments, and lack of any social support, all led

Three AIDS Books

Epidemic of Courage by Lon G. Nungesser St. Martin's Press, $15.95

by Paul Reed

pidemic of Courage is a collection of 13 interviews with gay leaders and others who have been involved in the AIDS crisis. Subtitled "Facing AIDS in America," the interviews take a wide focus, looking at the impact the disease has had on the lives of these 13 individuals and how that has reverber ated out to the nation at large.

Of special interest to Bay Area readers are interviews with Dan Turner, Bobby Reynolds, and Armistead Maupin—three San Franciscans with rather different experiences and interpretations of what the AIDS crisis has

Turner was the second man diagnosed with Kaposi's sarcoma at San Francisco General in 1982, and he is one of the longest living individuals with this disease in the country. In his interview, Turner discusses his feelings around the time of his diagnosis and goes on to talk about how managing his health has changed his life toward one with more attention to responsibility and to the well-being of others

Maupin, the celebrated author of the "Tales of the City" books, discusses what the AIDS crisis has meant to the gay communi ty, particularly as it is perceived by people outside the gay com-munity. When asked about the movement towards gay freedom in the light of AIDS, Maupin answers honestly, "Well it just answers honestly, "Well it just means we're going to have to fight harder to achieve visibility ..." And, discussing changes in his own sexual identity, Maupin says, "... I've learned to get genuine satisfaction from the kind of blanketing gay love that I give to my friends and that I get back from them ..." back from them .

Bobby Reynolds' interview is a bit more sobering than many in the book, focusing on his AIDS diagnosis and his honest, outspoken thoughts about the epidemic. In response to a question concerning his values about life and death, Reynolds summarizes: "What's been really diffi-cult is seeing so many men my age and younger die. Getting to know them intimately, and I don't mean in a sexual way, but just getting to know them and watching helplessly as they fade and die. That's a bitch." Death Rush by John Lauritsen and Hank Wilson Pagan Press, $3.95

Here we go again with the Here we go again with the gruesome approach that unfortunately characterizes so much writing on the subject of AIDS. The cover of Death Rush features a skull and crossbones on a bottle of poppers. But anyone who is reviewing his sexual habits to reduce risks (and who has not yet, in this day and age abandoned in this day and age, abandoned poppers) should be interested in this brief treatise on nitrite in-

The bulk of the text is an annotated bibliography of medical reports and other literature on poppers. There is no "light reading" here. Death Rush is more a summary to date of what is known or suspected about the relation of proper in companions. role of poppers in compromising the immune system.

The chapter "The Poppers Industry and Its Influence" is a vaguely interesting presentation of industrial and bureaucratic games in action—the result of which is a lack of any real regulation of these dangerous and useless substances

A Strange Virus of Unknown Origin by Dr. Jacques Leibowitch Available Press (Ballantine Books),

Originally published in France in 1984, this book is already sad-ly outdated. But its value lies in its presentation of the history of the search for the "AIDS virus." That story reads like a medical detective story, if rather drily. Most fascinating is the early data on AIDS in the far reaches of the planet—the kind of information that is simply never available in the mainstream press, with its histrionic agenda of unbalanced reporting.

A substantial portion of the text is a review of the clinical manifestations of AIDS infection, the facts with which we are all so readily familiar. But as a well-written early history of AIDS, Strange Virus will stand as a useful reference.

Love Triangle

The Best Man by Paul Reidinger E.P. Dutton, $15.95

by Robert Burke

irst novels about first loves are generally to be avoid-ed. First novels about first loves and coming out are generally to be—well, suffice to say that most reviewers mercifully choose to ignore them. For some reason (perhaps the same reasons), first love and coming out are pheno-mena which produce a literature that is a parody of itself. It is simultaneously maudlin and melodramatic and it's ever so angst-ridden prose is now rarely even grist for the mill; more like sentimental slop for the trough

But it is the exceptions, though few and far between, which prove the rule. In the first-love category (as well as first-novel), Sagan's Bonjour Tristesse comes to mind. Bonjour Tristesse comes to mind. More recently, in the first-love and coming-out category, Andrew Holleran's Dancer from the Dance or David Leavitt's fine collection, Family Dancing, would take the prizes. All of these novels find the reader nodding in recognition and enjoying the sort of pleasure that comes with intellectual engagement. And all of these novels can easily be placed alongnovels can easily be placed along-side Paul Reidinger's first novel, The Best Man.

It is the sort of novel that, if one didn't know better, might redeem the genre. That, however, would be asking too much. Suffice to say that it works, and works marvelously well, on many levels. Reidinger gives us the levels. Reidinger gives us the story of David and Katherine and, finally, Ross.

David and Katherine meet as indergraduates at Stanford and fall into a sort of love. While the experience is something new to (Continued on page 38)

Living Gay Now

Gay Life: Leisure, Love and Living for the Contemporary Gay Male Edited by Eric Rofes Doubleday/Dolphin, $12.95

f you have just recently con-firmed your gayness, this is certainly the book for you. If you have been out longer living, thinking, and feeling through more of gay male life— the value of Rofes' collection might be somewhat lower.

But basically, the idea is still great: six to 11 essays apiece on "Health and Image," "Home," "Love," "Culture and Leisure," "Love," "Culture and Leisure," and "Gay Identity." And the selection features some of the best writing talent around, for example: Darrel Yates Rist, Samuel Steward, Armistead Maupin, Don Vining, and the B.A.R.'s Paul Reed and Mike Hippler.

In his introduction, Rofes writes that his book "is intended to serve as a source of informa-tion and thoughtful analysis for gay men who are seeking to ex-plore various aspects of their lives," and also lives," and also asserts that, "What these men share is a sense of self, or personal identity, which has comfortably integrated homosexuality into the whole person."

There is a solid, fundamental practicality running throughout, though some of the best essays are decidedly challenging. Typical are Brian McNaught's Typical are Brian McNaught's "Fighting Our Sexism," Joseph De Marco's "The Care and Feeding of a Friendship Network," Maupin's "Design for Living: Strengthening the Body Politic Seven Ways," and Charles Henry Fuller's "Getting the Colors Right: Making Inter-racial Relationships Work." Rist's vehement "On Hating Ourselves" will blow off the top of your head.

The first three pieces in "Culture and Leisure',— on becoming an "opera queen," identifying with Judy Garland, and adoring a clutch of female entertainers— are an unfortunate stumble. But Steward's definitive elebration of erotica and Terry Helbing's critique of gay theater immediately restore balance.

"Gay Identity" is, appropriately, the strongest section. Some of the muscle is negative but healthful as a cathartic, as Donald Vining demonstrates in "Myths About Gay Men That Even Gay Men Believe." Though Thomas Ho's "The Gay Tao" might seem exotic, it is really marvelous common sense. And Alexander Wallace drives home the best anti-separatist advice of all in "Get Your Mind Out of the Ghetto."

This book is a great buffet. Though your own gay experience might make some of the offerings too familiar to be enticing, and a few of the confections are simply tired froth, there is a lot of flavorful nourishment here.

Best Man

both of them, both of them are something unspoken between them that never allows the affair to be consumated. The something is David's growing awareness of being gay and, finally, his ability to articulate it to Katherine. But to David's sur-Katherine. But to David's sur-prise, Katherine remains all of the things he originally fell in love with: beautiful, smart, per-ceptive, and above all, loving. Moreover, she is an eminently practical young woman who, giv-en the situation, is able to adjust her sights accordingly. When she and David graduate and move in together in San Francisco, it is their mutual support of one an-other which allows them to deal with the eternal undergraduate questions of what to do with one's life and who to do it with.

David is the first to come to terms with the complexities and pain of loving as he becomes involved in a menage a trois with a gay couple. But what might have become the stuff of pulp romance or pornography in the hands of a lesser writer is redeemed by Reidinger's insight and perception into David's state of mind. David isn't victimized here, which might have been the easiest resolution to the affair. But it is precisely David's own self-knowledge, his own awareness of his motives, which produce in him the sort of moral and ethical lethargy that will even-tually end his friendship with Katherine.

Katherine, despite some early set-backs, finally has a man, Ross, who is everything one could want in an upwardly mobile White Knight. A law student at Stan-ford, Ross has no doubts or questions about himself or what he is going to do with his life. He has it all and wants even more. The consumate Yuppie, Ross is not just materially greedy; he is just as greedy for experience and the one experience he really wants, unbeknownst to Katherine, is David. Not openly, of course. He is much too aware of his pero-gatives and privileges as a titularly straight male to endanger them with any open declarations or overt behavior. And yet to David he appears, at least initially, to be offering so much of what David has imputed to his own version of Mr. Right that he is irresistable.

But as David's own affair with with Ross' affair with Katherine with Ross attair with Katherine, he comes, albeit slowly, to the realization of what price he has already paid and will continue to pay for his silence. Ross is, after all, soon to be a lawyer and though he has yet to graduate, he has already mastered the finer arts of obstrufication and ma-nipulation. He experiences no qualms in discussing his impend-ing marriage to Katherine and the life he plans for them in the Peninsula suburbs even as he leaves David's bed. It is not an leaves David's bed. It is not an either/or matter to him, merely a matter of balancing both. He manages to cover himself so well that it is only to be expected that before long he will have taken adultery off the moral plane and simply made it a matter of style. simply made it a matter of style.

All of the readers (and one can only hope for many) of The Best Man can look to Katherine's eventual and inevitable enlight-enment about the moral imbecile she has married and neither envy nor relish her the experience. But for Reidinger, it is enough to leave that to the reader. His con-cern in The Best Man is David and with bringing David forward out of his lethargy and into a growing awareness of his identi-ty and the responsibilities that are implicit in that identity.

The fact that he does so without any of the high-handed dramatics that would mark a lesser novel is to his credit. The fact that he does it so well leaves his readers anxiously awaiting for Those who did survive found themselves totally excluded from the sympathy the world showed other victims of Naziism. Instead of release after the war, gays were sent to prisons to serve the remainder of their sentences. None were granted any compensation for their suffering. Homosexual acts remained illegal in West Germany until 1969 with the same Paragraph 175 in effect.

Sex Stacked Deck

by John Coriolan
Gay Sunshine Press, $8.95

by Mary, Shaw

or much of his novel, Coriolan seems more like a crafty dealer than he does a fictioneer. He loosely shuffles together a large stack of super sexy cards from the Straight to Hell series with a much smaller number of stream-of-conscious-ness cards. The result is an oscillation between sexual stimuli and arresting insight, with the latter usually the loser.

Or so it seems throughout the greater part of the story. But in the latter third the components merge to demonstrate a necessary relationship. In recollection, the fantastic excesses become an inevitable demonstration of an obsessive sexuality which limits and even damages real love.

Bisexual Mike Kincade, some Bisexual Mike Kincade, some-times teacher, actor, and poet, meets his former student, the neurotic but beautiful Caswell Green, on an October beach. Cas-well's recent summer of servicing a select but large clientele on Fire Island is known to Mike. Caswell is repeating the routine at Riis Park when he is not making sand fortresses, which are breached and then obliterated by the incoming tide.

The fortresses are a symbol of his vulnerability. Mike, somewhat vulnerable himself as he recalls his departed lover Carlo, impul-sively sweeps Caswell, wavelike, into his emotional embrace. The romance begins there, but the waves of sexual impulses soon threaten it.

That's a realistic, important, nagging gay male dilemma. Though not new, it deserves statement. When Coriolan explores the thoughts and feelings of Mike and such major supporting char-acters as architect Alex and former college roommate Jonny, he makes us know its poignance

ne makes us know its poignance.
But when it comes—and comes and comes—to the sexual episodes, the waves become floods, and the shape of emotional realization is swept away like the sand of the fortress. Usual waves are not enough for Coriolan. Apparently, for him, there had to be tsunamis.

Mike Bulawit: Volleyball and More

by Rick Thoman

an Francisco's volleyball team traveled to San Diego over the Thanksgiving holiday for the 8th annual San Diego Gay Volleyball Tournament Nov. 29 and 30. Leading the San Francisco squad was Mike Bulawit, making his third appearance at the tournament in the last four years.

Joining Bulawit were Steve Moore, Gary Edde, Mark Mageo, Rex Marzke, Fred Ennis, and Leo Amituanai. All players are veterans of Gay Games II competition.
Eleven teams took part in the tournament, including host San Diego, which finished second in the "B" division at Gay Games II. San Francisco's "B" team was fifth in the Games.

SE Tagm leader Bulawit is in SF Team leader Bulawit is in charge of the weekly volleyball action at Collingwood gymnasium, and stepped in to act as co-chair for volleyball for Gay Games II.

"I basically got involved as a co-chairperson when the original people quit and Sports Director Hal Herkenhoff asked me to fill in," said Bulawit. "It seemed like a great opportunity to be a part of the Games, so I accepted. I missed out on the first Games due to the fact that I had just moved to San Francisco and it was too late for me to make any of the volleyball teams, so I wasn't going to be left out again." He actually did manage to get involved with the first Games by housing an athlete.

The "everything else" Bulawit refers to are his other commitments to the gay sports community. Not only was Bulawit busy putting on the Gay Games volleyball competition as well as parROZ. SAN FRANCISCO

ticipating in it, but he was also bowling in the summer Community League and managing the Rawhide softball team in the Gay Softball League!

Bulawit is arguably one of the most active athletes in the gay community, and he's not just content with participating — he helps get things rolling by volunteering to take charge.

"Ordinarily, I don't like to be the one in charge, but I always seem to get talked into things," said Bulawit. "I'm like the "Mikey" in the Life cereal commercials; you know, 'Give it to Mikey, he'll do it.' And generally, I do.'

Bulawit has been talked into a lot of things for the benefit of gay sports. He's starting his 6th year as a player in the Wednesday Community Bowling League, and is president of the winter league for the 4th time. He's also been president of the summer league action for three years and acted as president of the first Hawaiian Vacation League in 1985. And with all that, he maintains a 176 average, his team, the Rolo's, are currently in 3rd place, and for the last three years he's finished in the money in the recently held No-Tap Tournament.

His contribution to the Gay Softball League has been just as involved. He started playing in 1983 for the now-defunct DeLuxe team. In 1984, he was elected Most Valuable Player of that team. In 1985, when the team moved to represent Hamburger Mary's, Bulawit was "volunteered" to act as the team's manager. He was also selected to represent the team at the Switch-Hitter's Show that year, an act of dedication beyond the call of duty. Last year, when Mary's dropped out as a sponsor, Bulawit took the team to the Rawhide and managed them to a spot in the playoffs. Bulawit has agreed to return as manager of the Rawhide for the coming 1987 season.

Bulawit admits that with softball over for this year it's been easier for him to find the time to make the trip to San Diego.

"Volleyball is something I really enjoy," Bulawit said. But no more so than the other sports that divide his time, but not his attention. His focus remains clear involvement in and dedication to improving sports in the gay community.

SF Fifth at San Diego Volleyball Tourney

by Rick Thoman

The City, San Francisco's gay volleyball team, finished fifth at the 8th annual San Diego Gay Volleyball Tournament. The competition took place Nov. 29 and 30 and included teams from Baltimore, Houston, Phoenix, Tucson, Long Beach, and Los Angeles.

During the first day of roundrobin pool play, the 12 competing teams were split into two divisions of six, each playing a total of ten games. At the end of the first day of play, San Francisco was on top of its division with a 9-1 record. The only loss for The City came as it split a pair of games with Phoenix, the second place team in San Francisco's division. Long Beach and Los Angeles' West Side Waves were one-two in the other division after the first day of play.

The City wasn't quite as successful during Sunday's double-elimination finals. The SF squad struggled against teams it had beaten the previous day, and as a result wound up fifth overall. The West Side Waves beat out a tough Long Beach squad for first-place honors, while another Los Angeles team, The Killer Bees, finished third. San Diego's Munchkins squad was fourth, followed by San Francisco and Phoenix.

"I'm not sure if we fell apart or if the other teams just started playing better," said SF team captain Mike Bulawit. The breaks fell to the opposing teams as several close games slipped away from San Francisco during the finals.

Bulawit cited the strong hitting of Steve Moore and Mark Mageo, as well as the consistent setting of Gary Edde and the defenisve play of Rex Marzke, as stand-outs for the San Francisco team.

Trophies for the outstanding players of the tournament went to Long Beach, with LA's West Side Waves picking up the team championship honors. San Francisco was presented with a special award for Best Uniforms.

"It's not what we were hoping to come home with, but it beats coming home empty-handed," said Bulawit, who remained upbeat about the results of the tournament. "I know we made a definite impression at San Diego, especially after our first day of play. We hope to return next year and finish higher in the standings."

SAN FRANCISCO POOL ASSOCIATION PLAYOFFS

Ducks Claim Third Crown

by Lauren Ward

The DeLuxe Ducks quacked their way to a third consecutive S.F. Pool Association city championship last Tuesday by defeating the Park Bowl 4½x9s in the finals at Park Bowl.

The league's 17th season began last August with 23 other teams hoping to down the defending city champs. The Ducks, led by Captain Lisa Duncan, added Rick Moore to further strengthen the team which featured Lauren Ward, E.Z., and Ron Barulich. Rey Bustillos signed on as an ace reservist and the Ducks were off to an undefeated season, winning all 15 of their matches.

"It was truly a team effort," Lisa said. "When one of us would falter another would come through." Seeming to share that belief, the team played with the calm confidence that's the key to victory in league competition.

The Ducks wish to thank

Richard Zimmer and the staff of the DeLuxe for their enthusiastic support throughout the season.

The team will represent S.F. at West Coast Challenge XIV to be held at the Five Star Saloon in downtown Reno, Jan. 9-11. They'll face stiff competition in champion teams from Southern California.

San Francisco Stages: A Concise History, 1849-1986

by Dean Goodman Micro Pro Litera Press, $19.95

by Frank Howell

h, the lively memories of theater in the city by the bay. My earliest recollection takes us back to 1947 when I was a tender nine or ten years of age. My mother, brother, sister, and I came to the big city for the first time in our lives for three enthralling days. We arrived in Oakland, took the ferry boat across the bay, and beheld the skyscrapers. We climbed into the balcony of the Curran Theatre and ou awe-struck eyes saw the original New York production of Lerner and Loewe's Brigadoon. What a night!

Other reminiscences come rushing by, such as the bizarre rushing by, such as the bizarre evening I spent witnessing a performance of Bernstein's Candide at the Company of the Golden Hind in Berkeley. The piano player literally dropped dead of a heart attack during the play. That memory will certainly always linger. ways linger.

Now, a dear friend, Dean Goodman, a grand old roue of the theater, will further stir our feverish imaginations by trans-porting us through decades of porting us through decades of sublime backstage intrigue and bright footlights of stardom. A number of sharp black and white photographs enhance the occa-

This entrancing saga stretches back to 1849 when the first play-house, the "Jenny Lind," opened. nouse, the Jenny Lind, opened. The first major players were the noted Edwin Booth family. One of the sons, John Wilkes Booth, assassinated President Lincoln.

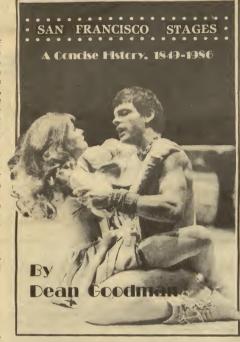

An exotic cast of characters followed the S.F. stages through-out the 19th century: Lotta Crab-tree, Oscar Wilde, the Barrymore free, Oscar whide, the Barrymore family. Even the legendary Sarah Bernhardt appeared here and played before the convicts at San Quentin.

In our century the Queen City of the West played host to Katherine Cornell, Helen Hayes, Tal-lulah Bankhead, Ruth Gordon, and Shirley Booth

Goodman drops in many yarns of his own, such as one about playing Shakespeare with John Carradine here in 1943.

Really literate drama did not grace our stages until the 1920s. During the depression a group known as the Wayfarers attempted the first group acting company. Their courageous efforts ended in 1941.

In 1951 the Actors Workshop was created by Jules Irving and Herbert Blau. The American Conservatory Theatre reared its provocative head in 1967.

Goodman has been around the Bay Area for more than 30 years He has acted with and directed many of the great names, such as many of the great names, such as Jose Ferrer and Sylvia Sydney. He clearly knows where the bodies are buried. For example, we learn that he appeared in Ibsen's The Master Builder (1959) with a sweet young damsel named Dianne Feinstein.

Goodman covers a vast range of theatrical institutions, the Civic Light Opera, Beach Blanket Babylon, and a number of the ethnic minority houses, such as the Asian American Theatre.

The gay community is not neglected as Goodman reminds us that SIR (Society for Individual Rights) staged some legendary drag shows, and he also provides a brief history of Theatre Rhino.

But the most readable seg-ment of San Francisco Stages concerns the love-hate relationship we all have with media critics. Dean lambasts drama observ-ers like Bernard Weiner and ers like Bernard Weiner and Steve Winn of the San Francisco Chronicle for their frequent at-tacks on ACT during the final reign of William Ball.

He feels an articulate connois seur of the lively arts should be a person of broad background who possesses a working knowl edge of acting and directing. He needs to appreciate various methods of acting and not grandstand for, say, method approach over conventional acting

As the author points out, news-apers frequently hire individuals as play reviewers who have no particular qualifications. One drama scribe had even performed as a sports writer before doing the drama section of the Chroni-

Appalling examples of ignor-ance are cited. One writer in a re-cent news article opined that George Bernard Shaw was an in ferior writer who was rescued from obscurity only by the musi-cal My Fair Lady. Another unin-formed yokel felt that Noel Cow-ard was strictly old hat.

One unfortunate fact about the San Francisco cultural scene is that audiences favor mostly musicals and comedies and shun dra-matic shows. The gay community can be especially guilty. Witness last June when Berkeley Rep presented The Normal Heart, a presented The Normal Heart, a gripping exposition of the AIDS crisis. The masses stayed away in droves. As a result, As Is, an equally compelling piece of work about the dread disease, was canceled. For many silly queens tv sit-com and frothy musicals must be the order of the day. Nothing is allowed to disturb their dreamy vision of reality. Small wonder Los Angeles often threatens to take away the man-tle of cultural center of the West Coast.

Coast.

Salvation For Sale: An Insider's View of Pat Robert-son's Ministry by Gerard Thomas Straub

by Frank Howell

very era has a distinctive very era has a distinctive sort of messiah. In the 1920s and 1930s Aimee Semple MacPherson held sway over enraptured masses. In our own day of televangelism we have Pat Robertson, who is not bur-dened with any doubts. He knows dened with any doubts. He knows he is God's personnel manager. Robertson is supposed to be a man we should envy. But when we read the life stories of the super famous we often learn the gods have clay feet. Frequently the lives of these flashy prophets do not compare well with the public image. image.

Oral Roberts was driven to distraction by a gay son who com-mitted suicide. His older son fought constantly with Oral and finally divorced his wife.

Another respected religious ge, Alan Watts, the author of sage, Alan Watts, the author of The Way of Zen, battled alcohol-

The Bible says the meek shall inherit the earth, but the heroes of the holy boob tube usually drive extremely expensive auto-mobiles and have spacious homes in Beverly Hills.

Perhaps the biblical teachings didn't sink in deep enough. Gerard Straub found this to be the case when he left CBS to work as a producer under Pat Robert-

Straub brought much theological confusion with him when he signed on. He fled his rigid Catholic faith and a disturbed cannote faith and a disturbed marriage. He sought the answer with CBN. Working with the talk show the 700 Club was quite stimulating at first, but disturbing trends asserted themselves.

The staff often felt they were short of help and underpaid, while huge sums were expended on expensive tv equipment and lavish buildings.

Another problem was working with incompetent people with lit-tle broadcast background. Robertson's fond dream was to create a nightly news show with a Chris-tian perspective. There was a common tendency to blame fail-ures on the devil instead of acknowledging human failure The difficulties were totally obective but Satan was forced to take the blame.

On one occasion Robertson discussed his vision of the first video coverage of the second coming of Christ and serious consideration was given to the problem of the white radiance given off by the body of Jesus. Would such an effect cause a problem with the cameras?

The staff members were con-The staff members were constantly attempting to convert people they came in contact with. Pamphlets were passed out at every opportunity. The Bible was considered the Protestant Pope and was often quoted.

Each day at noon attendance was required at a prayer meeting. Spying on the private habits of employees was not unknown, and speaking in tongues was usually encouraged.

Naturally, gay employees led highly closeted lives. Those found to be imperfect were often found to be imperiest were often fired. As Straub expresses Robertson's mentality, "Pat's hidden agenda has more to do with crushing Satan than with against could."

Even Mother Teresa was considered beyond the pale because of her strong Catholic faith. The fires of hell roared just ahead of her skirts.

An attempt at Christian soap opera floundered due to poor public response. The scripts were extremely preachy and dull.

seems poorly organized and transitions are a bit confusing. Straub has the habit of interrupting his narrative to expound on his own Catholic theology and back-ground. But even his religious critiques give us much to think about. He feels ideas from other systems of belief such as Buddism can be beneficial, but such a concept would chill the blood of an upright fundamentalist. Straub also believes conversion is a gradual process that unfolds over a period of time and not in a sudden blaze of glory.

Healing services are of course iven a hearty seal of approval. But Straub cites the case of one video preacher who stumbled into a nightmare when on tour in Germany. A woman was stricken with a heart attack at a healing service. He was arrested, under German law, for practicing medi-cine without a license. As Straub forcefully points out, in this country, "taking an evangelist to court would be political suicide." Our hero was finally sacked when his liberal tendencies were uncovered. Today he considers himself a proud humanist and is currently working for CBS again. But the Pat Robertson God box continues to pour out the right-wing fantasies of a bygone age. Gays need to be constantly aware of the fundamentalist threat to our basic human rights. The Robertson political agenda is really not religious at all but political. The combination of pie-ty and politics is deadly. We must never let down our own powerful awareness. Let us remember this each time we tune in the 700

Lorca's Gay Transformations

Lorca: The Gay Imagination by Paul Binding Gay Men's Press, $8.95

by Marv. Shaw

nquestionably Spain's premier poet and drama-tist of the 20th Century, Federico Garcia Lorca made an indelible, unique imprint on the consciousness of Spanish culture everywhere and human understanding worldwide. From the very early Romancero Gitano (Cypsy Ballad) through the "Oda a Walt Whitman" to The House of Bernarda Alba, the capstone of his bitter, violent tragedies, Lor-ca's highly original creativity still

Now, Paul Binding, an American Litterateur with good critical credentials and a residence in Spain, has come forth with a perspective on Lorca's art as in-spired by the poet-dramatist's gay nature. Binding's support is almost entirely those elements and aspects of the works which could make his thesis convincing. This singularity is both the fascination and the problem of Unfortunately, few facts of Lorca's life and death do anything to corroborate Binding's interpretation. The sickly early childhood could hardly be cited anymore as the gestation of gayness. No one anywhere has ever claimed to have been his lover. The absence of heterosexual affairs could merely be the circumstances of a poet whose passion was his art. The theory of his assassination as a homophobic crime by some violent Falangists in the early days of the Civil War is unprovable be-cause necessary facts have never been uncovered.

But to Binding's credit, the use to which he puts the components and sometimes the full texts frequently achieves high probability. One strong point is the parallel he draws with Tennessee Williams' battered heroites As my how sent to Please. nessee Williams' battered heroines. As many have seen the Blanche Du Boises as projections of Williams' gayness, Binding sees the barren wife (Yerma), the abducted Bride (Blood Wedding), and the imprisoned daughters
(The House of Bernarda Alba) as representations of a gay male barred from emotional fulfillment by

More direct is Lorca's frank appreciation of Whitman's gay-ness—'lover of the bodies under the rough cloth' and similar lines in the famous Ode. Then too, there is the celebration of the matador Mejias in the fateful "At Five in the Afternoon," which could very well be more than a memorial to a remarkable man.

It is when Binding gets into Lorca's poetic imagery, which he interprets symbolically, that probability sometimes becomes dubious. While a recurrent use of Apollo as a reference to the first

Super Legend in Art Deco

The Secrets of Mabel Eastlake by Donald S. Olson Knight's Press, $7.95

by Marv. Shaw

A t first it appears Olson has merely trashed the cup-boards of Old Hollywood, thrown what he found into a blender, and poured out a camp on sirens of the silver screen. Fur-ther acquaintance, however, suggests something else—nothing profound, but just serious enough to be engrossing as a mystery told in a feverishly ap-propriate style. The result is definitely unique entertainment.

Mabel Eastlake was "purchas-l" out of the Black Orchid nightclub by Paradise Pictures and produced into stardom by a German director. Her screen persona was a daring, tough, highly sexy woman with a dark past, a brilliantly dangerous present, and a highly questionable future. Linked also to a stand-in fash-ioned to look just like her, a hasbeen actor turned art deco artist, a dipsy leading man who be-comes her husband, a lesbian gossip columnist, a hoodlum lov er, and various hangers-on, her life in the fabulous Glass House resembles her films all too

Gay narrator Alex Stein has come out from New York intent on getting the secrets of Mabel Eastlake for a book. After he insinuates himself into Glass House, which has become a sin ister but luxurious prison, he soon finds himself a player in the last chapters of a murderous spree that began 40 years before, when Mabel's career was broken off by gunfire and an auto smash.

It's not that Olson has an entirely new cast here. Mabel herself seems at times like Dietrich, Garbo, Harlow, and even Mae West. Kranzler, the director, resembles both von Stroheim and von Sternberg. Columnist Hilda Hatter is a shade of Hopper. Swanson's Norma Desmond might have been the inspiration of the whole

The originality is in the style. Glass House itself is the essence of '30s modern. Olson frequent ly uses it to express the mystery it contains, as in Alex's first look at the central stairway: "Like a twisted spine, each of its vertebra a slab of polished black glass separately set in the mirrored wall, the staircase followed the spinning vortex of the room to a high recessed doorway."

The same extravagance throbs in the sensual action. "Through half-closed eyes he watched as the Child took his foot and cradled it firmly between his knees. He began to rub into it a light, scented oil. His deep, sunburnt smell reached Alex. They smiled at one another as the secret, silent voice of the flower began to speak."

This novel is decadent melodrama for its own sake. Roll in it and love it.

Olson is reportedly working on a play about the Mauve Decade's impish illustrator Aubrey Beards-ley. If the style matches this book's, it should be the theatrical trip of its year!

Also, as Binding himself is careful to explain, much of Lorca's imagery came from other sources, such as the surrealism of Dali, who was his friend, and from primitive Andalusian mythology, such as the duende, an earth spirit. While it is not improbable that one image might have several meanings for an imagination as richly ambiguous as Lorca's, the question of the as Lorca's, the question dominant meaning remains un-
